Supervisory Board Named To Oversee Cease-Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diplomatic sources say the United States and North Vietnam have agreed to resume negotiations that could lead to a cease-fire in Indochina by Sunday.

These sources, members of the foreign diplomatic corps, said South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu could be expected to sign the agreement, despite Saigon's strident statements in recent days.

The State Department would not comment on these reports. But Harry Dent, one of President Nixon's key political advisers, said Monday night he doubts any settlement can be reached within a week's time.

"There will be no push to end the war immediately on our part, and I don't think there is any way it can come before Nov. 7," Dent told newsmen in Atlanta Monday night. "There are still some important things unsettled ...."

When word of the impending peace agreement broke last week, North Vietnam demanded that the United States be prepared to sign the papers Oct. 31, Paris time. But White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters Monday "we would not sign such an agreement until the conditions are right."

Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's chief foreign-policy adviser, announced last week that "peace is at hand" but added that one more negotiating session of three or four days would be necessary to nail down details of the proposed cease-fire agreement.

Kissinger said the time and place for such a final session are up to Hanoi, and Nixon administration officials said Monday there is no word from North Vietnam about the next round of talks.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Indonesia, Hungary, Canada and Poland are being named to an international supervisory control commission to oversee the cease-fire in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

The commission would succeed the International Control Commission—chaired by India with Poland and Canada as members—that was set up to oversee implementation of the Geneva accords in Indochina.

In Saigon, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker conferred with President Thieu for an hour today in a session apparently aimed at resolving differences in the draft peace agreement.

Thieu's chief aide, Hoang Duc Nha, told newsmen that the timing of a cease-fire is up to the communist side. But if Kissinger meets with the North Vietnamese again, Nha said, "then he will have to come back here ....

"It is clear that Dr. Kissinger must explain our position to the North Vietnamese and then each side must consult with its allies."

Nha denied any U.S. pressure for Saigon to sign the agreement worked out by Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris.

Living Laboratory Proposed Here

By DAVID ZIEGENHORN

An innovation in the teaching of natural sciences, "the living laboratory", will bring the study of ecology within walking distance of the Sikeston High School classroom, if approved by the board of education.

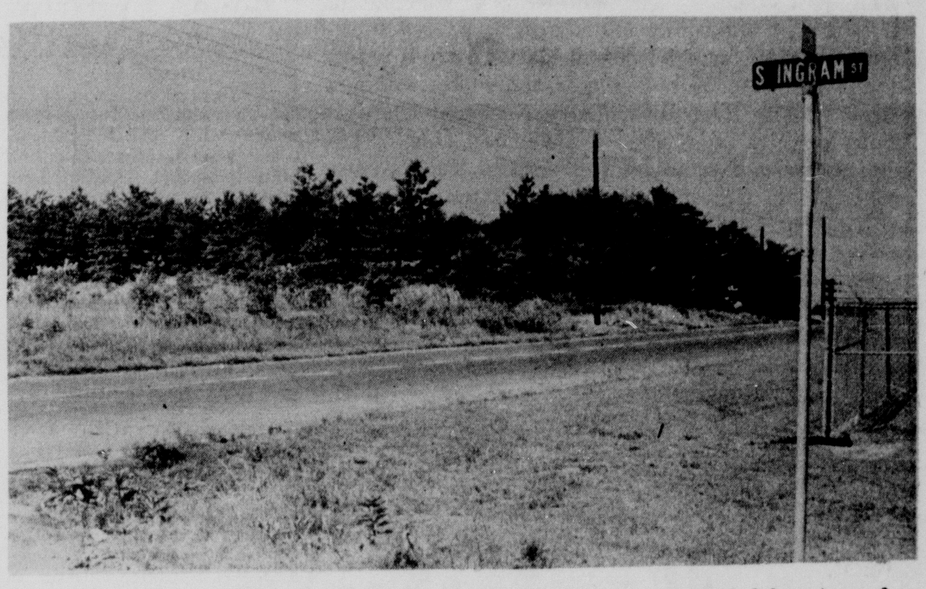
Biology instructor Murray Sullivan has proposed to the board and the department of curriculum that any or all of a seven - acre area of wooded land located along South Ingram Road between Ables Road and Virginia Street, be used as a "resource center" or "living laboratory".

The section of land is ideal in many respects, he said. In a letter to the board, Sullivan pointed out many of its favorable aspects.

The location is within walking distance from the high school and Matthews Elementary School, as well as being on the same section of land as the proposed eighth and ninth grade student center, Sullivan said.

The other schools in the system would also be close enough to the area that a bus field trip could easily be conducted during a single class period.

The land already belongs to the school system, according to Ernest Elledge, head of the department of curriculum.



A SEVEN-ACRE plot of land may be used as a natural laboratory for students in the Sikeston school system if approved by the board of education. It is located just south of Public School Stadium.

Elledge added that this wooded area has been used as a source for many of the young trees landscaping the senior high campus. Controlled removal of young trees could provide the school system with future landscaping plants, he said.

In Sullivan's letter to the school board, he outlined a number of uses for the center:

It could be used for general biology or general science field trips for all grade levels.

For bird studies and botanical field trips in which different plant types could be identified and studied by means of leaves, stems, buds, flowers and fruit.

As a place where plant and animal experiments could be designed and conducted that would be otherwise too bulky or large in scope for the greenhouse and animal room. An example would be exercises in budding and grafting of

AMERICA'S BLACK POETS

Black America has produced a remarkable number of excellent poets. Yet the only black author of verse known to most Americans is Muhammad Ali. The title of James Weldon Johnson's poem "O Black and Unknown Bards" could serve as an epitaph for almost all the black poets born in this country. "Because most blacks and whites were ignorant of the eternal contribution of Africa to mankind's achievement, because most were unaware that black men in Latin America had become leading figures in politics and the arts, most Americans have, until very recently, felt somewhat uncomfortable about blacks being poets," writes Alan Lomax, editor of the anthology 3000 Years of Black Poetry.

Lucy Terry, a free Negro living in New England during the 18th century, is regarded as the first American black poet. "An Evening Thought" (1760), by Jupiter Hammon, was the first well known literary work by a black published in the United States. Hammon's poems were religious and showed remarkable rhyming skill for an unschooled slave. An anthology called Les Cenelles was published in 1845 by a dozen French-speaking, free blacks living in Louisiana. But these men did not "link themselves personally with the condition of the slaves and their poetry scarcely touched racial feeling," writes Arna Bontemps in the introduction to the definitive anthology, The Poetry of the Negro, which she edited with Langston Hughes.

Paul Laurence Dunbar was the most widely known Negro writer of the 19th century; he has been called the first outstanding black author. Dunbar's poems, many written in Negro dialect, have been critized for portraying a rather idealic picture of plantation life. But his sentimental portraits reflected the tastes of his age rather than any insensitivity to the problems faced by black Americans. The Harlem Renaissance of the 1920s produced America's most famous black poets -- Langston Hughes, Claude McKay and Countee Cullen. Their poems reflected a new sense of pride and racial consciousness which characterized the work of black writers after the first World War. Another form of black poetry emerged during the Twenties -- the blues, folk poetry set to music.

The past decade has witnessed a tremendous outpouring of black pride and a growing interest in the black arts. The long tradition of black poetry is finally being investigated by both blacks and whites, and new voices, such as Don Lee, Larry Neal and Clarence Major, are attracting sizable audiences. One of the most powerful figures on the current black poetry scene is Nikki Giovanni. Her record album, "Truth Is On The Way," in which she reads her poetry to the accompaniment of gospel music, is part of an oral poetry movement which hopes to bring poetry to the people. Jean - Paul Sartre has said that Negro poetry is "the true revolutionary poetry" of the time, something that transcends race. The visions of truth and life reflected in the works of black poets offer something for all men.

OUR HUMAN NATURE

The office philosopher has come up with this paradox:

No matter how difficult your job is, after a while it becomes easier.

No matter how easy your job is, after a while it becomes more difficult.

'Now Where's That Thieu?'

NEW YORK (AP) — Memories are like the seasons of the year.

They are recurrent miracles and each has its own pageantry.

The more memories you have to summon up on the days when your heart needs a little cheer, the more fortunate your life has been.

You've been exposed to a lot of living yourself if you can look back and remember when —

Before the women's liberation movement made the feminine sex so serious and self-conscious, girls rather liked being called chicks.

It was considered indelicate to speak of your glands in mixed company.

A jewelry store always kept in the window a clock that had been wound up and told you the right time.

A man outdoors without a hat on looked funny.

It was so unusual for anyone to drink anything except straight whisky that when anyone ordered a Martini he met a barful of sneers, and the bartender would tell his wife later when he got home, "I don't know what the world's coming to."

Men who chewed tobacco or smoked cigars looked down on younger men who smoked cigarettes as weaklings or worse.

No woman who valued her reputation would think of going out in public unless she was firmly girdled by the sanctuary of a tight-fitting corset.

The only thing most people knew about the planet Mars was that it had canals on it — and now that has turned out to be wrong.

Any political candidate who wore sideburns was regarded as a leftover relic from the 19th century.

Everyone felt the neighborhood would go down when the first guy in the block let it be known that he had put one of those new-fangled rumpus rooms in his basement.

A man could go through his whole life and never buy more than one pair of shoes or one necktie in a single day.

Children were just the opposite of what many are today. Then they had dirty ears and clean minds.

Those were the days — remember?

MAJOR SCHOOL FINANCE PLANS DOMINATE STATE TAX PICTURE

Legislatures in 21 of the 41 states holding sessions this year have or will consider tax increase proposals totaling $7 billion annually, according to a national survey by Tax Foundation, Inc.

Bulk — $4.5 billion — of the unusually high election year total comes from initial proposals in three states for statewide financing of public schools. While many states are bracing for court-ordered restructuring of school finance, formal proposals for the new state taxes required seem most likely to be considered this year in California, the Foundation said. All three proposals involve a measure of off-setting local property tax relief.

The remaining $2.5 billion in tax increases to cover state spending plans compares to the $2 billion proposed in 1970. Last year 30 states adopted new and increased taxes expected to yield a record $5 billion annually. The Foundation estimates state tax receipts in fiscal year 1972 at $57 billion. They were $23 billion in fiscal 1962.

Legislatures in 15 states have or will consider a variety of major tax proposals — in Alaska, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas Kentucky, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia and Washington. Lesser measures were up for discussion in Florida, Idaho, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri and Utah.

Three of the 10 states remaining without a broad-based personal income tax were to consider its adoption — New Hampshire, New Jersey and Washington. South Dakota has again rejected the tax.

Eight states will consider increasing yields from their personal income taxes and eight from corporation income taxes.

Proposals in at least a dozen states would boost revenue from sales and use taxes.

Drivers may be paying a one or two-cent increase in gasoline taxes in 11 states. Smokers in 11 states face the probability of cigarette tax increases, some as healthy as 50 or 100 per cent.

Drinkers in five states may see the reflection, as New Yorkers already have, of higher state taxes on alcoholic beverages.

THANKS TO A DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS

Thanks to a Democratic controlled Congress, both House and Senate last week overrode a veto by President Nixon of a 24.6 billion dollar water pollution control bill. The new law sets a national goal of pollution-free waters in our nation for not later than 1885.

Its passage will bring benefits to every county and possibly every city and town in the nation, most of which are dangerously troubled with poisonous waters.

It's defeat would have brought health hazards and critical water supply conditions to most of them, but it would have benefited the wealthy industrialists who do not want to spend the money to keep their wastes out of the nations water. The veto was typical of President Nixon, who has favored the wealthy at the expense of the rest of us.

Wonder if he'll now send out a letter like he did on the Social Security hike, seeking to take credit for the law that will benefit millions of today and untold millions of tommorrow.

'You Don't Try Voltaire'

For publishing two anti-police articles in "L'Idiot International," French author Simone De Beauvoir has been charged with libel. Like her colleague, existentialist Jean Paul Sartre, she faces a year of imprisonment and a $54,000 fine for allegedly defaming the forces of law and order by writing that they used "systematic torture and brutality" during student demonstrations.

The fact that there is such a law on the book says a lot about the fragile state of press freedom throughout the so-called free world. The fact that authorities are willing to use this law to try two internationally renowned citizens says a lot about modern France.

As in the United States, it is reported that public opinion in France is running strongly in favor of law and order and against indulgence. But, as we hopefully learned from the Chicago Seven trial, it would be self-defeating to put expert polemicists on trial and thus give them a major public forum. The late President Charles de Gaulle understood this well when he rejected advice during the Algerian war to arrest Mr. Sartre for his open sympathy with the liberation front. "You don't try Voltaire," he said.

"Rover!" he exlcaimed. "How can you embarrass me in front of my friends like this? I give you a five dollar bill and send you on a simple errand. Here I find you drinking and carousing around with a female dog. You've never done anything like this before!"

"First time I ever had any money," replied the dog.

OUR VETERANS

The nation paused briefly on October 23 to pay homage to its men and women who have served in the armed forces. It was the least we could do. The rolls of our heroes from the days of the American Revolution to Vietnam have mushroomed into the millions. During the course of our turbulent history, many of our brave men have made the supreme sacrifice. They died in the tradition of freedom. Theirs was a noble cause.

Veterans Day was legally created by the Congress to remind us of the tribute we owe all our veterans. For years, we paused at 11 a.m. on November 11 to pray and pay tribute to those who had fought so gallantly in World War I. The advent of separate endings of World War II brought into focus the need for national observance of the end of all wars and an outpouring of thanks to veterans who had served so faithfully. The bitter memories of Korea and later Vietnam have reemphasized our debt to the veterans of service in the U.S. Armed Forces. Whatever the shortcomings of our leaders in the times of mortal conflicts, the serviceman has come through. He has been our salvation.

It is a matter of record that we have had some narrow escapes. There are Valley Forge, Pearl Harbor, the rout in Korea before General Douglas MacArthur set things right, and the Tet offensive inVietnam. Each time, our armed forces were equal to the occasion. They bailed us out. Now the great majority of those heroes are in the ranks of veterans, living or dead. A grateful nation has saluted them on Veterans' Day. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON— One of President Nixon's favorite labor leaders, who has been inducted into the Republican holy of holies, is under double— barreled federal investigation.

Both the Justice and Labor departments are looking into the doings of Kenneth T. Lyons, a tough and talkative union boss now serving as national vice chairman of Democrats for Nixon. Justice is studying whether he committee perjury in a Mafia— related case, and Labor is investigating charges that he misused union funds.

Lyons heads not only the 100,000— strong National Association of Government Employees but, embarrassingly for him in the present circumstances, the 30,000— member International Brotherhood of Police Officers.

But while government gumshoes have been checking on Lyons, President Nixon has been courting him. The President has appointed him to the prestigious White House higher education advisory council and has invited him to at least two White House affairs.

As an officer of Democrats for Nixon, Lyons also attended the exclusive Texas barbecue which ex— Treasury Secretary John Connally threw for Nixon. But Lyons's entree to the councils of the mighty hasn't deterred the federal sleuths.

His trouble with the Justice Department began last June with Senate testimony about a detergent called Poly— Clean. The product, according to the Senate testimony, is linked to a Mafia family with a record for strong— arm business tactics.

--Incriminating Vouchers--

The detergent's maker, David Weiner of Palmer, Mass., was called on the witness stand. His testimony and vouchers he produced showed that, at Lyons's request, he made four trips to Boston to discuss Poly— Clean. One of their lunch and dinner companions, the vouchers show, was Tony Camerota. He is a nephew of the late Nick Camerota, who was the Mafia godfather for western Massachusetts until his recent demise.

Finally, the vouchers tell of an agreement between Weiner and Lyons for distributing Poly— Clean through a company called "Noreast Sales Corporation."

Talks about the deal lasted for hours, the vouchers attest.

After Weiner's damning statements, Lyons demanded to testify before the committee. He appeared without a lawyer to deny all the allegations. He swore he didn't know Camerota, had never heard of Noreast Sales Corporation and couldn't recall Weiner's "ever buying me a cup of coffee."

Lyons also testified that he had met with Weiner twice, not four times, that Weiner had tried to get him to push Poly— Clean, but that he had rejected the deal.

The Senate record was so shot with contradictions that it was referred to the Justice Department for possible perjury prosecutions. Within the last few days, the Senate has also sent Justice an article from the Boston Globe identifying two new prospective witnesses in the case.

As for the probe into Lyons's alleged misuse of union funds, the charges were brought by union dissidents. The Labor Department will confirm only that the investigation deals with "financial affairs."

We reached Lyons in Boston for his comments. He talked at length without notes, repeating the same detailed denial he had given under oath to the senators. "The thing is so unreal," he said of the Poly— Clean case. "It comes as a complete mystery to me." On the alleged misuse of funds, he was "confident" he would be cleared.

Weiner, in an earlier talk with my associate Les Whitten, said he ran a clean company with no Mafia ties. He also stuck to his Senate testimony.

It may take the courts to resolve the conflicting stories.

--Looking To 1976

A number of Democratic hopefuls, anticipating George McGovern's defeat next week, are already jockeying for positions in the 1976 presidential sweepstakes.

They include three of the Senate's most able and articulate members— Indiana's Birch Bayh, Idaho's Frank Church and Minnesota's Walter Mondale. All three have told friends, however, that they will step aside if Sen. Ted Kennedy seeks the nomination.

McGovern is also expected to make a second bid if he isn't too badly mauled by the voters on November 7. But he might have trouble simply keeping his Senate seat, since he must come up for re— election in 1974 in conservative South Dakota.

McGovern's two vice presidential choices, Tom Eagleton and Sargent Shriver, are also making presidential noises in private. But Eagleton wouldn't likely challenge Kennedy and certainly Shriver will give his eminent brother— in— law first crack at the nomination.

The big question mark is whether Kennedy will run. He has told intimates that he's definitely interested but hasn't made up his mind.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Labor's Unseen Fight: Union Chiefs United In Low Visibility Election Drive For Congressional Control

WASHINGTON — It may be sacrilege this time of the year to believe, but there's one scoreboard which totes more significance than what the Athletics did to the Reds, or what's in the future for the Giants, the Jets, the Oilers, the Steelers, the Raiders, et al. It is the score quietly kept in labor's innermost executive suite on how friendly "during a political lifetime" some of the nation's most powerful men have been on "the Hill."

These powerful men, second really only to the President, are the chairmen of some 16 potent committees which dominate the Congress and a long string of subcommittees such as Sen. Ted Kennedy's section of the Judiciary Committee which he has used to batter and "investigate the hell out of " the opposition.

These committee chairmen control the nation's lawmaking. They are the guardians, as now made up, of labor's national strength. Virtually all of them are pro-labor. If by coattail magic the Republicans and some conservative allies control the Congress as a result of the Nov. 7 election, labor will have but two "friendlies" chairing the Congressional committees which have protected the unions and their leaders for decades.

Ted Kennedy, for example, would lose the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure with which he has hit at Republicans, Richard Nixon and business. He would also lose the Labor and Public Welfare Committee's Subcommittee on Health's top chair from which he is directing his nationalized health-care drive.

Add to this, say, the replacement by a conservative Republican of labor's ally, Congressman Ray Madden, as incoming chairman of the pivotal Rules Committee. This body is the 'traffic cop" of the House of Representatives.

This group is not as all-powerful as it once was, but it is almost impossible to get a bill out on the floor for voting without its approval. It can still obstruct, delay or even kill House action on major legislation. Party leaders and chairmen of other legislative committees are dependent on this Rules Committee to clear vital bills for the House floor so they can be debated and voted on.

In this Congress its chairman is Mississippi's William Colmer. Labor scores him at 109 to 4 – that is, during his tenure he voted "wrong" according to the labor chiefs 109 times and "right" only four times.

He's retiring. If the liberal-labor- Democratic alliance carries the House Election Day, he will be replaced by veteran Congressman Ray Madden of Gary, Ind. One of the men who can speak for labor leader George Meany says of Madden: "He is a real proven friend." He is close to the United Steelworkers. And he would give the liberal-labor coalition control of the Rules Committee for the first time in 45 years. His voting score is 118 right on labor's board.

That's why labor is spending millions of dollars quietly in a drive to win a series of marginal House and Senate races. That's why Meany directed the labor controlled black A. Philip Randolph Institute to work for laberal pro- labor candidates only in the marginal districts.

It is the strategy of Meany, as well as those who are not neutral but are pouring it on for McGovern, to unite in the fight for a pro-labor Congress.

The switch of merely five seats in the Senate -- and perhaps four -- would give the Senate to the Republicans who could then "organize" it and name committee chairmen.

Already, on an ideological basis, the labor-conservative margins are close. On Feb.8, a motion to make arbitration compulsory in all transportation industries was killed. But a switch of only two votes would have passed it.

Had this become law it would have, in effect, ended strikes of Teamsters, and air, rail and maritime workers.

And if the non-labor bloc in the House had been able to switch 10 votes out of 435, the conservatives would have been able to ban the issuance of food stamps and probably unemployment insurance and welfare payments to strikers -- a goal of managements' labor law reform organizations. Several years ago, General Electric strikers received $25 million in public welfare benefits, and General Motors employes, $30 million.

But it is the structure of the committees labor watches and is out on the hustings fighting to keep under the chairmanship of those who have the "right" score.

For example, the critical Ways and Means Committee chairman, Wilbur Mills, whom labor would have supported for President. His score – 64, right, 51 wrong. He would be replaced by Republican Herman Schneebeli, whose score is 76 wrong and 8 right. The heavy-spending House Public Works Committee is chaired by John Blatnik, labor score: 115 right, 5 wrong. He would be replaced by Republican William Harsha, score: 70 wrong, 11 right.

Or the priceless House Education and Labor Committee. Chairman is Carl Perkins,Ky., who has voted right 112 times, wrong 9 times. He would be replaced by either Albert Quie, 78 wrong and 16 right; or conservative John Ashbrook, 73 wrong and 6 right by labor's count.

There are other vital committees which control America's destiny and the balance of power on the labor-management front. Which could make or break the power to strike, which would control the flow -- and types -- of social laws.

Labor keeps that lifetime score on all Congressmen. Few others do.

Labor forays out and fights for its people and power. Few others do.

Burlison Record Criticized

By RON PORTER

What do you do with a Congressman who doesn't want the voters to look at his record and who votes both ways on bills so he can tell different members of his constituency that he voted the way they wanted him to?

M. Francis (Frank) Svendrowski says you vote him out of office. Svendrowski is the Farmington Republican running against incumbent Cape Girardeau Democrat Bill D. Burlison for the 10th District Congressional seat.

He brought his campaign to Sikeston Monday.

Svendrowski says that in a face- to- face debate at Fox Junior High School in Arnold, Burlison asked the voters not to look at his record. He reportedly said the record of a Congressman is extremely complex and cannot be understood by the average person. Burlison told those at the meeting that to look at his record would only confuse and mislead voters, Svendrowski said.

Svendrowski said that in a recent television interview, Burlison said he should be re-elected so he can reveal crimes and corruption in government. He cited his background as prosecuting attorney of Cape Girardeau County.

Svendrowski said that for the 21 months Burlison was prosecuting attorney, he didn't prosecute much of anything. He ran for Congress while receiving a full-time salary from the county. Most of the cases went unprosecuted, Svendrowski says, including the case of the County Collector who allegedly embezzled $30,000.

Svendrowski said what Burlison was really saying was that the average person is incapable of voting intellegently and should not event attempt to understand his record.

Svendrowski also cited two contradictory votes by Burlison. He said Burlison voted against busing to achieve racial intergration and then turned around and voted for a bill authorizing funds to be used for busing. On June 27 he voted for the anti- ballistic missile system, and then the same day voted against funds to build it.

Svendrowski is a Conservative Republican who feels the federal government is overburdened. He says many programs should be returned to local level governmental units.

A supporter of President Richard Nixon, he says he was happy to hear the President say the federal government must give up some of its powers.

"Government should not attempt to do for people those things which they are capable of doing for themselves," Svendrowski said.

Carolyn Bond Tells Of State Campaign

By DONNA SATTERFIELD

Mrs. Carolyn Bond, wife of Christopher S. (Kit) Bond, Republican gubernatorial candidate, visited Sikeston Monday.

Before coming to Sikeston, the vitality and energy of Mrs. Bond had found her in Jefferson County meeting residents of High Ridge, House Springs, Murphy and Fenton.

She said she met a Jefferson County man who said he hadn't registered to vote because he didn't know anything about the candidates and didn't think a person should vote unless he knew what he was voting for. Mrs. Bond asked the man how long he had lived in Missouri and he replied that he had lived here four years.

"It's rather sad, isn't it?" she asked.

Mrs. Bond has recently been traveling around the state talking to residents about their concerns. Since March, she has visited all 114 counties and made over 275 talks to college groups, women's clubs and even men's civic groups.

When asked if she has met any hecklers, she replied that there have been none and she has been given a very good reception everywhere.

Of the 23 mental health institutions operated by the Missouri Division of Health, Mrs. Bond has visited 22 and will visit the last one today in Nevada. She visited Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic in August.

Mrs. Bond believes the Bootheel area to be Democratic territory, but she is enthusiastic about her husband's chances here and everywhere in the state.

"More and more people are voting for the man, not the ticket. I personally feel it is wrong to vote a straight ticket if one knows not all of the men are qualified." She said the young people are especially voting for the man and the issues, and that many older people are following suit.

She eagerly declared that Bond was ahead in the recent polls and added that he is ahead two to one in mock college elections. "I just hope they vote," she added.

Mrs. Bond left Sikeston for Poplar Bluff and, from there, went to Chamois where she was scheduled to speak at a Republican rally.

Mrs. Bond received her bachelor's degree in speech and hearing therapy and her master's degree in guidance and counseling from University of Kentucky at Lexington.

Former Sikeston Man Credited With Saving Two Lives

HASTINGS, Neb.-- Immediate action by KHAS Radio News Director Michael Lee was credited with possibly saving the lives of an elderly brother and sister on Oct. 24, when a fire caused moderate damage to their Good Samaritan Village apartment.

Formerly of Sikeston, Mo., Lee graduated from Sikeston High School in 1963 and from Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, Mo., in 1967.

He is the son of Mrs. Ronald Lee of 314 Hardin, Sikeston.

He was band director for Richland High School at Essex, Mo., for three years and was also news director for KSIM Radio Station in Sikeston before moving to Hastings early in 1971.

Lee heard the radio alarm for the fire given over the monitor in his car in Hastings and arrived at the scene before firemen.

Neighbors told Lee that the apartment had been evacuated, but when calls for help were heard from inside the apartment, Lee entered.

He found Edna Wilkey and her brother Fred trapped in the bedroom.

She was led to safety but her brother, paralyzed from the waist down, was carried outside by Lee just as firemen arrived.

The source of the blaze was traced to brooms stored next to a hot water heater in a utility room.

Police Seek Youths For Flipped Volks

Two youth have been charged with peace disturbance and three others are being sought by police in connection with an incident Monday night in which an automobile was overturned about 11 p.m.

Police say Bill Boshears Jr., 18, of 103 Selma, and Jack Lee Beckwith, 18, of 608 Blanton are being charged with peace disturbance, after Beckwith allegedly tried to hit Pat Curry of 510 Sikes at the Curry home. Further charges are pending.

After the incident, three other youths are alleged to have overturned Curry's Volkswagon. Being sought are Denny Alcorn, 18, of Benton, Bruce Wolferding, 18, of 402 Broadway, and Donald Culbertson, 18, of 231 Daniel.

Police say they expect to arrest the three this afternoon.

All five were picked up for questioning about 1 a.m. today. Only Boshears and Beckwith were detained at the time, police said.

Police did not have a damage estimate on the car this morning.

Jack Lavell Cathern, 844 Agnes, was arrested for keeping chickens within the city limits. Police arrested him after they discovered he was raising four of them on his property.

Randy Hatcher was charged with public intoxication; Doris Burlene Swarts, 836 Ruth St., driving while intoxicated and destroying private property; Ruby Harris, 613 Hart St., cashing no account checks; and Daniel Ray Layton of Route Four, careless and imprudent driving.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her wedding a formal gown of Polyester organza with scalloped Chantilly lace imported from France. The gown had an empire waist with an A-line skirt and long train. Tiny, covered buttons accented the back. The bodice featured a high neckiine edged with stand-up lace. The long, sheer sleeves were also edged with lace which extended down to the wrist. There was a pearl bracelet for carring the train after the ceremony.

For her hair, she chose a profile cape of Chantilly lace, outlined in pearls and centered with crystals, attached with a three-tiered veil of silk illusion.

She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and pink - and fuchsia - tinted carnations and baby's breath tied with pink ribbons.

Miss Donna Brucker was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of hot pink, double knit with a high, ruffled neckline and long sleeves accented at the wrist with a ruffle. Her hat was a matching color with ribbons. She carried a nosegay of matching pink and fuchsia carnations.

CAN A CANTOR BELT OUT ROCK?

TORONTO (AP) — The use of folk rock at Jewish religious services was discussed at the 19th American Conference of Cantors held here.

Revisions in the wedding service, music attractive to youth and other ways of adapting traditional religion to the changing times were topics of debate.

Cantor Howard Stahl, a recent graduate of Hebrew Union College in New York, called the use of rock music "a gimmick."

But, said Stahl in an interview, "it's a holding pattern to get them into the synagogues — then you've got a fighting chance."

Ann Landers

Ann's Laundry Not Cleaner Than Neighbors

Dear Ann Landers: As a former resident of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, I was fascinated by your by your statement that when you lived there, more than 20 years ago, you had the whitest wash on Valmont Avenue.

That statement also intrigued a reporter for The University of Wisconsin campus paper who decided to do some digging on her own. This is what she wrote:

"Dear Ann Landers: It wasn't very nice of you to publicly insult your former neighbors in a column that circulates all over the world. I contacted several women who lived near you in those days and this is what they had to say about your claiming the whitest wash on Valmont Avenue:

"Mrs. Wmma Weiss of 1619 Valmont Avenue commented: 'Ann was a wonderful neighbor but I don't recall that her wash was any cleaner than anyone else's.'

"Mrs. Paul Marg of 1610 Valmont said: 'I never paid much attention to my neighbor's wash. I couldn't tell you if Ann's was the cleanest or the dirtiest. But I do remember her as a very sweet and interesting person.'

"Mrs. G. W. Breml of 1618 Valmont recalled: 'Mrs. Lederer (Ann now) was a nice neighbor. She minded her own business.'"

A few others had similar comments but they preferred to remain anonymous. So it seems, Ann, that no one in Eau Claire remembers your wash as well as you do. Borrowing one of your nuggets of advice, I say, "Count your blessings--but make sure they're yours." --- Maggie Menard Of The Spectator

Dear Maggie: I remember every one of those women. They were all good neighbors and they minded their own business, too. I apologize if I insulted their laundry. Will you please go back and give them all my warm regards?

Dear Ann Landers: Now that the great American home wrecker (football) is being glorified on all the networks, will you please relay a message to my husband? There is no chance that I can get his attention until January, but he might listen to you.

Dear Husband: I am fast slipping into a state of depression as I face another season of watching you watch the idiot box as if it were the only thing in life that matters. But then I guess it is. I find it quite remarkable that you chat so easily with the players, whom you don't even know (and who never answer you, of course), while I sit there, the woman who has been married to you for 15 years, bore you three healthy, beautiful children, and I could drop dead on front ou your eyes and you wouldn't even notice.

I find it fascinating that you can call each and every player by name. You know where they were born and how much they weigh. I am certain you do not know how much your own children weigh and at this point I wouldn't bet that you could call them by name.

For the last three Thanksgivings you have not come to the table to eat with us. Christmas and New Year's it was the same story. When your children grow up they will remember that you ignored them. Nature has a strange way of paying people back. When you want their love and affection, they will tell you to get lost.--- The Girl In Your Wedding Picture. Remember Me?

Dear Girl: I'm printing this in October in the hope that things will brighten up around your house before the holidays. Thanks for writing.

BELL CITY — Individuals shared the spotlight in opening action of the Bell City B-team invitational basketball tournament Monday night.

Advance rolled up a 69-44 victory over Bloomfield behind Bob Cummins' 25- point effort, while Delta defeated Scott County Central, 54-45, behind the leadership of Vance Cook and Roy Slinkard, who dumped in 17 and 15 points respectively for the winners.

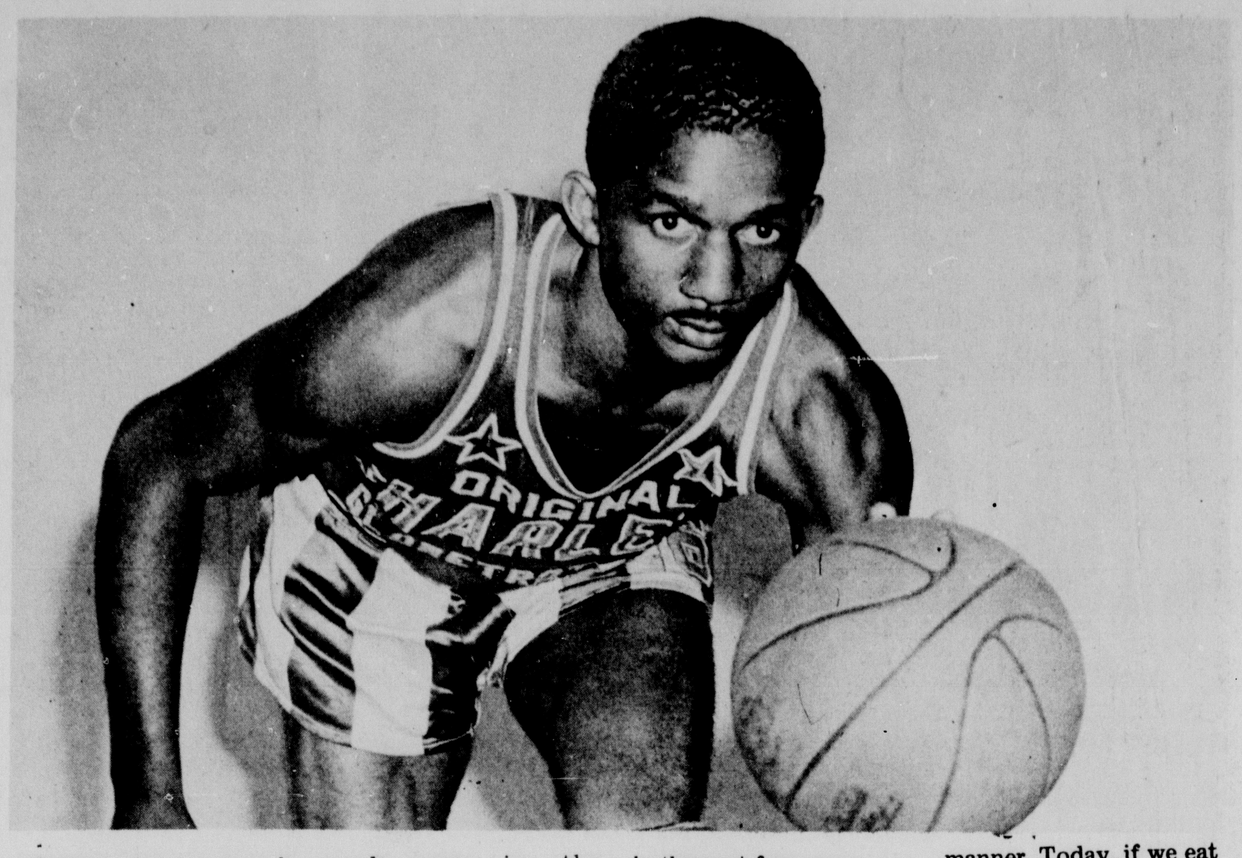
Haynes Brings Troops To SHS



Few American athletes can be recognized away from their own country.

Harlem Globetrotter star and all-time basketball great Marques Haynes is as popular in Paris, France as he is in Paris, Tex.

The Globetrotter standout, who will be in action with his Trotter teammates Nov. 8 at Sikeston High School Field House, was playing high school basketball in the late thirties, and has played college or professional ball every year since.

Last year Haynes was invited to be a guest instructor at an international coaching clinic, held in conjunction with the Amateur Basketball Championships in Yugoslavia. "If a popularity contest had been held," reported one of the international coaches in attendance, "Marques would have won by a landslide."

But popularity is nothing new for Marques Hayes.

When Marques was establishing himself as basketball's first super-star, Babe Ruth was still hitting home runs.

Today, as Hank Aaron becomes the first player to approach Ruth's record, Marques is still going strong.

Although he looks virtually the same as he did the day he graduated from Oklahoma's Langston College, Marques won't admit how old he really is.

"I won't say how old I am," laughs Marques, "but I will say I am the only active player who has played competitive basketball in the thirties, forties, fifties, sixties and now in the seventies."

After traveling a couple million miles, and playing thousands of games in this country and around the world, Haynes can look back on a myriad of memories and experiences.

"I guess the greatest thrill for me has been the opportunity to be a kind of first hand observer of the type of social changes that have occurred in this country in the past few years.

"In many cities the Globetrotters were the first group to play in an integrated building, because we wouldn't play any other way," Marquest says.

"Because we were a black team, we often spent nights sleeping in the car and eating cold sandwiches. And not all those nights were in the South. Today, things have changed. Now we get treated in a first-class manner. Today, if we eat cold sandwiches, it is because we want to eat cold sandwiches. But instead of just reading about such change, I feel fortunate to have actually taken part."

Although everything changes in time, it is nice to know that in at least one area, the world of basketball, one thing remains constant.

That is the uncanny ability of the original Mr. Basketball, Marques Haynes.

Big 8 Coaches On This Week's Games

KANSAS CITY (AP) — All four coaches of the underdogs in Saturday's Big Eight Conference football games say their teams can knock off the favorites.

Colorado Coach Eddie Crowder said Monday the Buffs "are capable of being just as keyed up for Nebraska as we were against Oklahoma." The Buffs upset Oklahoma 20-14 on Oct 21.

Coach Johnny Majors, who sends his Iowa State club against Oklahoma, said the Cyclones can beat the Sooners.

Vince Gibson, the Kansas State coach whose Wildcats were thrased 52-0 last week by Oklahoma, predicted that "we're going to beat Missouri."

Kansas Coach Don Fambrough, disappointed over last week's 34-8 loss to Iowa State, asserted the Jayhawks "can bounce back" against Oklahoma State.

The coaches made their observations during the weekly Big Eight telephone briefing session.

Crowder, whose Buffs were stunned 20-17 by Missouri last Saturday, said, "I'm confident our men will get fully ready to play" the third-ranked Cornhuskers. "A loss always sits in their stomachs like bad food."

Crowder was high on his praise of Nebraska, however, particularly of the defense which has shut out the last four opponents.

Nebraska's defense is playing with more confidence and abandon than its defense of last year," he said. "And their offensive line is giving Dave Humm as good protection as you can expect in college football."

Nebraska Coach Bob Devaney said Colorado "is a big, strong football team capable of running right at you. They have the personnel to give us an awful lot of trouble."

Majors qualified his statement about beating Oklahoma, the nation's seventh ranked team, saying, "It's going to take our best effort of the year. We have's played anybody as tough."

Chuck Fairbanks, the Oklahoma coach, described 14thranked Iowa State as "on of the best teams in the country. They are playing with a lot of emotion."

Gibson didn't know it at the time but successive upsets over Notre Dame and Colorado have skyrocketed Missouri to 16th in the rankings.

"We're planning on beating Missouri," Gibson reiterated. "We turned our season around at this time last year, and I think we will this year."

Missouri Coach Al Onofrio wasn't about to say the Tigers might be taking the Wildcats lightly despite Kansas State's 52-0 spanking by Oklahoma last week.

"We don't overlook anybody," Onofrio said. "Kansas State has a dangerous football team. Dennis Morrison is a good passer. We got beat by Nebraska 62-0 and then came back and won those two big games."

Fambrough, promising lineup changes that will bring freshmen into the picture, said Robert Miller, a fullback in previous games, will be moved to tailback against the Cowboys. The new starting fullback will be Vince O'Neil.

"Iowa State was the first game we had a lack of effort by our team," Fambrough said. "we're going to go with our kids who want to play. Our running game's hurting us. We've got to move the ball on the ground. We've moved Miller to tailback to get the ball to him more."

Oklahoma State Coach Dave Smith predicted the Jayhawks "will come here with both barrels loaded."

'Let 'em Boo'

DALLAS (AP) — "Let 'em boo," said a satisfied Craig Morton. "When I'm throwing touchdowns and the Dallas Cowboys are winning, I can live without the cheers."

The longtime No. 1 whipping boy when pro football fortunes wilted here, Morton passed for three scores Monday night and set up a fourth in a 28-24 win over the Detroit Lions.

"Sure, I heard them boo when I was introduced," said the 29-year-old Morton. "It's a free country. I'm not telling them who to vote for ... and I'm not telling 'em who to applaud."

Roger Staubach, engineer of Dallas' world championship of 1971, is healed from his preseason shoulder separation. He's ready to play, hungry for a comeback. But, Morton has the job and won't let go.

"As long as Roger and I are in competition, there will be Staubach fans and Morton fans," said the 6-foot-4 Californian. "It's a way of life for me in Dallas, but all I can do is perform."

Morton was a point machine, heaving a 38-yard touchdown bomb to Billy Parks, one of 33 yards to Calvin Hill and a 15yarder to heretofore unknown running back Mike Montgomery.

A 27-yard screen from Morton to Montgomery set up a one-yard touchdown smash by the second-year man who came from San Diego in the deal for the controversial, untalkative, idle Duane Thomas.

Dallas, 5-2, pulled within a game of Washington's Redskins in the National Conference East while Detroit plunged back into a tie at 4-3 with Green Bay in the NFC Central.

Morton was 11 of 19 for 206 yards in a game where Coach Tom Landry's articulate plan was to control the ball and pass less than 20 times.

"Detroit is better on offense than defense," said Morton, "so we tried to play keepaway."

Joe Schmidt, the tough exlinebacker who coaches the Lions, said Dallas' 14 quick points put Detroit in a hole from which it couldn't dig. "We're still tied for first in our division," he said. "I still think we can win it."

Dallas beched its two $60,000a-year wide receivers. Bob Hayes and Lance Alworth didn't unlimber until the final five minutes while two younger fellows, Ron Sellers and Parks, handled the main work.

New Coach Finds Changing Attitudes at Cal

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

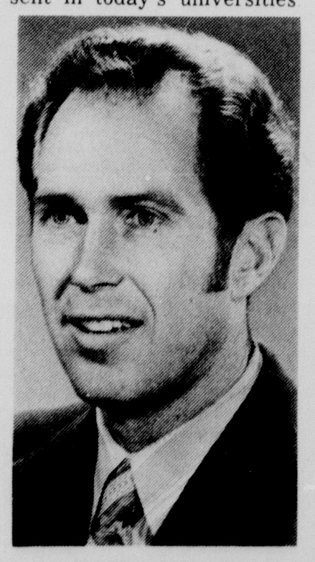
BERKELEY, Calif. — (NEA)—He has just come back at 7 o'clock this morning from Fresno after a long spring practice session on the soggy turf of California Memorial Stadium yesterday afternoon. Now he's back in the shadows of the Berkeley hills this afternoon for more intensive drilling of the 86 player in motley football uniforms.

Because these are the busy days for Mike White, a new head coach in college football. Recruiting (as he was doing in Fresno). Organizing. Instructing. And at the same time learning.

Mike White, at 36, looks like he should be the freshman coach. Firm-jawed, snub-nosed, clear-eyed, and as trim as he was when he played varsity football at this same school 15 years ago. He is now the head football coach at the University of California, whose tradition in the sport goes all the way back to 1886.

"I really think," he says, "that California is ripe for football success."

It has been different at California, which has had the Wonder Teams and the Thunder Teams, since 1964, when the Free Speech Movement was born at Berkeley and signaled the era of dissent in today's universities



Mike White

California hasn't been to the Rose Bowl since 1959.

"The old attitudes," continues Mike earnestly, "are gone. I think the students of today really want to identify with success. I have seen what football success did at Stanford."

Mike was the chief assistant these last eight years to John Ralston at Stanford, down the road on the other side of San Francisco Bay, and when Ralston resigned to go to the pros, Mike could have stepped up to the top job. He opted for Cal instead.

"It shows you how important success is," he says. "I came to California because I had a loyalty here, where I went to school. As for Stanford, it's a tough assignment to follow a winner. It's tough to inherit a job.

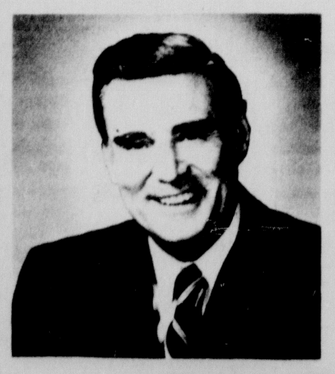
How Do YOU Feel About

A New Gasoline Sales Tax?

"While my opponent favors adding a new sales tax to gasoline, I would veto such an effort." That's how Ed Dowd feels about adding a sales tax to gasoline! He also says, "Gas prices are already high enough . . . adding a sales tax would be highly inflationary." If you feel the same way about adding a sales tax to gasoline, then Ed Dowd's your man for Missouri's Governor.



Sure, the people of Missouri want a change. But we all know a change for change's sake isn't the answer. The real answer lies with a mature man of Ed Dowd's unquestioned good character. The son and grandson of policemen . . . a father who understands . . . a man who didn't inherit a thing except an honest respect for the working man, a compassion for those less fortunate and a sincere willingness to help. We can trust Ed Dowd to do the right thing for all the people. Be sure November 7. Vote for Ed Dowd, Democrat for Governor.

Tomorrow's Violators

JEFFERSON CITY — No matter how bad things get -- how many wars are festering on the earth's surface, how gritty our air has become, how odiferous our water is -- we bank on the younger generation. "Well, thank Heaven for the kids," we say. "They'll straighten things out."

And then you begin to wonder.

"Road hunting continues to be a problem, with five cases in September, mostly juveniles," says Harry Quigley, conservation agent for Sullivan County. "Talking with the youngsters, I find most of them never have had the experience of hunting with an adult.

"They really don't know what hunting is all about and have had no one to teach them. Hunting from the car is easy and when they get together, they end up driving the roads."

And Charles Guthrie, agent for Linn County reports: "I had a lot of teenagers trying to shoot from cars."

And that time the feeling of depression and fear for the future grows overwhelming. And then ...

Agent Bill Otten of Adair County: "Had all three of my young men who took the conservation agent exam make it to the oral interview. I try to spend as much time as I can with these young people. Spoke to the Northeast Missouri College science class and was interviewed by three different college students on three different conservation problems"

Keglers Korner

By HILDRED POOLE

This past weekend Nita, Annette and Tammy went with me to Alabama to visit Mother and Daddy and all the other relatives. We had a very nice time even if it was a hurry up trip. Mother is doing pretty good, but she still doesn't get around much. Daddy is just the same. Still a little ornery.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Clues to the origin of the stars are being gathered by an unmanned satellite orbiting 500 miles above the earth.

Called the Orbiting Astronomical Observatory, the satellite is studying the composition of interstellar clouds, believed by some to be the matter from which stars are formed.

"Scientists cannot study these gaseous clouds from the ground," said Dr. Lyman Spitzer of Princeton University, "since the ultraviolet light used to study them cannot penetrate the earth's atmosphere."

With an accuracy equivalent to focusing on the width of a pencil 10 miles away, a fine error sensor orients the satellite's telescope toward an object under investigation. The electronic system was designed and built by GTE Sylvania Inc.

In U.S. -Russian Wheat Deal

Exporters Reaped Profits

BY REP. BILL BURLISON
10th DISTRICT

Late this summer, the sale of wheat and other grains to Russia and China was a major topic of conversation and controversy. It was charged that the large grain exporters, with help from the Department of Agriuclture, were making great profits at the expense of the farmers and small exporters. To investigate this matter, the Livestock and Grains Subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee held hearings. Following are some facts that emerged:

On July 8th, President Nixon and Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz announced that the U. S. and the Soviet Union had made a trade agreement. The terms stated that the Russians are to purchase $750 million in grains from private U. S. grain exporters over the next three years, with $200 million to be purchased in the first year.

In two visits to the U. S., the Soviets bought up 25 per cent of the total American wheat crop for the year -- at bargain prices. At this time, purchases are running four times ahead of the obligation. Russia had purchased $1 billion worth of grain, including eleven million tons of wheat worth $400 million.

The first sale of wheat was made by Continental Grain Company on July 5th, three days before the agreement was finalized. By the end of the day, Continental had sold $500 million worth of grain, more than twice what the Russians would be committed to buy. Ostensibly, the Nixon Administration did not know that the Soviets were in New York buying wheat while other Russians were in Washington arranging the agreement.

This sale of four million tons was followed by an order for an additional one million tons on July 11th. On July 10th and August 1st. Cargill, Inc., sold a total of two million tons. The exporters that participated in the sales are Cargill, Inc., Continental, Bunge Corporation, Cook Industries, Inc., Dreyfus, and Garnac.

In the meantime, the Department of Agriculture was sitting on an August 18th report stating that the outlook for Russian grain production this year had deteriorated. Such information would have alerted the farmers that they could sell their grain at a higher price this year. However, the Department considered the report "too controversial" and squelched it. This allowed the exporters to continue purchasing wheat at low prices.

Since 1949 the U. S. Government has encouraged grain exports through the use of subsidies. The wheat export subsidy fluctuates at the discretion of the Secretary, and is designed to be equal to the difference between the world market price and the U. S. market price. Thus, if foreign countries are paying $1.65 a bushel, and U. S. markets are paying $2 a bushel, the government will pay the exporter 35 cents a bushel so that he will not lose money by exporting.

As the news of the Russian sales became public, the price of U. S. wheat rose, and thus the subsidy rose. On August 23rd, the Department decided that the subsidy was getting too high. On August 25th, it announced an unusual retroactive subsidy for one week (August 25- September 1). The subsidy would be the current 38 cents per bushel, plus a 9 cents supplemental bonus subsidy. After September 1st, the subsidy would be allowed to fall and the government would not attempt to hold the world price at $1.65. Consequently, 280 million bushels of wheat were registered that week, with 60 percent of it going to Russia.

Although it was first denied by a former and a present Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, the Director of the Grain Division of the Export Marketing Service testified that he had called the larger exporters and advised them of an impending change in the subsidy. No calls were made to farmers, millers, bakers, or other businesses concerned with the wheat market. It is widely known that an exporter who knows what is about to take place is in a strong position to assure himself a handsome profit. It appears that the Department moved to protect the profits of the exporters who had been buying on a rising market. Exporters bought most of the wheat in July when the subsidy was 14 cents and registered it after August 25th when the subsidy had risen to 47 cents. It is estimated that over $120 million of taxpayers money has been spent on subsidy payments for the Russian grain sales along, this money now resting in the till of the export trade.

Underlying the foregoing events was a subtle shifting of top executives between the Department of Agriculture and the major grain exporters. The Assistant Secretary of the Department who had headed the team of negotiators in Moscow with Dr. Butz in April is now a Vice President of Continental Grain Company. This official told the Committee that he had received an offer from Continental in March. He bought a $100,000 New York cooperative apartment, using four Continental officers as references, on April 3rd, only days before he was to go to Moscow. He met with Russian officials in Washington again on May 9th, and not until two days later did he submit his resignation.

This official's replacement as Assistant Secretary is the former Executive Officer of the Cook Industries, Inc., a grain exporter. Another member of the negotiating team in Moscow, who served as General Sales Manager of the Export Marketing Service, left the Department in June to become the Washington Representative of Bunge Corporation of Memphis, another exporter. His predecessor at Bunge then joined the Export Marketing Service. Finally, a former Vice President of Cargill, Inc., has been appointed as President Nixon's Deputy Special Representative for Trade Negotiations.

In summary, grain exporters through inside information were able to profit by buying early wheat and placing future orders that cost considerably below what they could have expected to pay after the extent of the Soviet purchases had become known. Had the farmers of Missouri known of the probability of massive wheat sales, they could have waited and sold their wheat at much higher prices. I have found that most of my farmers sold their wheat at $1.25 to $1.35 per bushel.

Most wheat farmers who sold their crop at time of harvest are hurt in two respects. One, they got a low price for their wheat, and two, they will find a severe reduction in final payment on their wheat certificates. The amount of the certificate is based on the market price of wheat during the months July through November. Farmers are guaranteed 100 percent of parity on the domestic allotment. This is done by the government paying the difference between the five month average price and parity. Since wheat prices spiraled upward and remained there subsequent to the time the Missouri farmer sold his wheat, the five month average is thus high and the final payment low or non- existent.

It appeared to some of us that the Department of Agriculture had shown an undue concern about inordinate profits for the big exporters to the prejudice of the wheat producer. To partially offset this and compensate for the number two factor mentioned in the last paragraph, we introduced legislation under which the Federal government would pay the wheat producer the difference between what he sold his wheat for and the five month average. We succeeded in passing this out of the Committee on Agriculture, on which I serve. This was over the adamant opposition of the Administration. That opposition precluded getting the bill through the House and Senate and to the President for his signature. Had we been able to do so, all indications pointed to a Presidential veto. In fairness to the Senate it should be said that Senators Humphrey and McGovern, who serve on the Agriculture Committee, did their best for our proposal.

I am hopeful that the Department of Agriculture will be more careful in the future to guard the interest of the producer when that interest is in conflict with the interest of the grain trade.

Court Knocks Down Residency Requirement

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal court panel of three judges has knocked down Missouri's voter residency requirement of one year for voting in state and local elections and 60 days for voting for president and vice president.

The panel, in a decision reached Friday but not intended to be announced until Tuesday, set 30 days as the minimum required residency period for all elections in Missouri.

A permanent order was signed by U.S. District Court Judges William H. Becker and Elmo B. Hunter and Floyd R. Gibson, of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In a temporary injunction Sept. 22, the court ordered all county clerks to begin registering newcomers to the state, but their registration was kept separate from others in case the temporary order was reversed.

The suit was brought against Cole County Clerk Monte L. Christian by Daniel P. Card II, an assistant attorney general who was denied registration after he moved to the county in July.

The class action ruling will affect about 20,000 Missourians who would not have been allowed to vote under the oneyear requirement for state and local offices, according to unofficial estimates.

All out-of-state students also would be entitled to vote under the ruling.

On Oct. 4, Federal Judge William R. Collinson issued a temporary restraining order enjoining all county clerks from refusing to register students who live in dormitories and students who are not voting in another state by absentee ballot.

The decision was based on the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, forbidding denial of equal protection under the law.

In July, Aty. Gen. John C. Danforth, basing his opinion on the U.S. Supreme Court's decision overturning Tennessee's one-year requirement, said 28 days should be the residency requirement.

Danforth's decision was based on the minimum closing period between registration and the Nov. 7 election in Missouri counties with registration.

But Cole County Circuit Judge James T. Riley instructed Christian not to register voters under the Danforth opinion because it was not law, just an opinion.

In August, a St. Charles County circuit judge upehld Danforth's opinion.

Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, allowed to intervene in the federal court case, suggested 30 days as the minimum residency requirement.

The federal court order says that "all constitutional, statutory and other provisions of Missouri law denying to any resident, domiciled citizen of Missouri the right to register and vote in the general election ... before the close of registration, which is fixed by law at no later than either Oct. 10, 1972, or Oct. 11, 1972, depending on the applicable statute, are unconstitutional and void under the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The order said the decision also applied to precincts where registration is not required.

Advantages To Private Water System

If you're planning to build a new home, don't bypass a choice site just because the area doesn't have a municipal water supply. You can have your own well or provate water system, as it's more properly called, the Plumbing- Heating-Cooling Information Bureau points out.

To many people, the idea of a well conjures up visions of a large- diameter hole with a hand pump and moss- covered bucket. The modern private water system isn't as picturesque but it's much more efficient. Basically it consists of a small- diameter well, electric pump, automatic controls for turning the pump on and off and a storage tank.

More than 10 million families depend upon private water systems for their supply. Besides freedom of choice in a building site, the private system offers these advantages:

1. You have control over your own water supply. You're not subject to rationing due to drought or to living in an area where population growth has outstripped the municipal system's capacity to meet water demand.

2. The constant high pressure of a properly installed system enables you to make full use of all your water- using equipment. No rationing of water between the bathroom, kitchen and laundry during times of peak use.

3. The constant high pressure offers an effective means of fire- fighting, should one break out.

4. Once the system is installed, all it costs is pennies a day to run the pump. You're not subjected to periodic increases in water bills.

5. Well water usually tastes fresher than highly treated city water. Where treatment is called for, it's easy.

Raises the dough.

Looking Back

Church Observed 75th Anniversary

50 years ago
October 31, 1922

Mrs. Wm. E. Payne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Blanton, with her son, Bill arrived in Sikeston Thursday from her home in Ballston, Va., for a visit. We were happy to see her and the new grandson.

The two teams in football which have, for a number of years, attracted considerable attention in Southeast Missouri, will meet Friday on the Sikeston field. Charleston and Sikeston have long been rivals in athletics. The first few years Charleston had the lead over this school, but now the tide is turned and the local school has been winner.

G.A. Dempster left Wednesday for St. Louis to transact business.

Mrs. John M. Grace of Memphis, Tenn., was in Sikeston Saturday to visit relatives in Mississippi County.

40 years ago
October 31, 1932

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at the residence for James A. Hux, prominent Essex man, who died Saturday. Mr. Hux died at the age of 53 years.

Morehouse-- Mr. and Mrs. Martin Barnett of Cline's Island, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Sherrard Sunday.

Malone Theatre, tomorrow, Lee Tracy in "Washington Merry Go Round" with Constance Cummings, Alan Dinehart and Walter Connolly.

The Sikeston Bulldogs were stopped short Friday by the Chaffee Red Devils on the away ield, with the game ending in a scoreless draw. Both teams lacked pep. snap and punch, resulting in an uninteresting contest which to spectators seemed endlessly drawn out.

30 years ago
October 31, 1942

In homecoming fashion the 75th anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Church in Sikeston will be observed next week.

Sikeston's high school Bulldogs will renew the rivalry between the Poplar Bluff Mules Friday at the high school field here. On the basis of early season records the Mules appear to be favorites but the knowledge that upsets are frequent in football and the promise of a good game are expected to bring out a large crowd. It will be one of the last games that George (Torchy) Godwin, Poplar Bluff coach, will direct before a period of military services.

Glenn Keller, Missouri Ulilities lineman probably will lose the smallest finger of the left hand as a result of an electrical charge which entered his body at that point while he was on duty at a fire, which destroyed the Shainberg Store here Sunday.

One man was injured fatally and another hurt critically that he may not recover Monday when the truck in which they were riding was struck by a Frisco passenger train at a grade crossing in Lilbourn. James M. Smith, 20 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Smith of near Lilbourn, died Monday. Eddie Ward, 43, Lilbourn, an uncle of the victim, was brought to the Sikeston hospital in a critical condition.

J. Otto Hahs has resigned from the Sikeston school board and R.A. McCord, a former member of the body, has been named by the board to fill out the term expiring in April of 1943.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Young will spend this weekend in St. Louis.

A/B. Jimmie Henry Rodgers, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Rodgers of Crowder, is receiving an indoctrination course at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Tex.

The Sikeston High School Bulldogs, who have been weakened by a number of injuries, edged past a stubborn team of Central Tigers last night, 13—6.

John Doolittle, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus A. Doolittle, 117 West Kathleen, a Daily Standard newsboy, received some minor cuts and bruises on the left leg Saturday when he was hit by a cab on New Madrid street, across from the Dunn Hotel.

Man Fined For Killing 74 Eagles

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)-The former manager of a flying service was fined $500 by a federal judge today after pleading guilty to taking part in the killing of 74 eagles.

Doyle Vaughan of Story, Wyo., former manager of the Buffalo Flying Service, also had pleaded guilty to a conspiracy charge lodged following a federal investigation of the deaths of eagles in the winter of 1970-71.

District Court Judge Ewing T. Kerr said he had decided that since Congress had made the crime a misdemeanor he did not think the court should "elevate it beyond what Congress has done."

He sentenced Vaughan, who had made written pleas of guilty and was not present in court, to pay $500 within 10 days and he was placed on probation for six months without supervision on the other counts.

U.S. Attorney Richard Thomas then said the government would drop the remainder of the 374 counts originally filed against Vaughan, rancher Herman Werner, Werner's ranch and the Buffalo Flying Service.

Prior to sentencing, Thomas told Kerr he considered Vaughan one of the most culpable defendants because his participation "was for profit." The government had alleged Werner paid the flying service $15,000 for predator control. Helicopter flights with paid gunners, including Vaughan, were alleged to have flown over ranchland shooting eagles from the sky.

Mac Davis Gets 'Hooked' into Hit

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The country-and-western field of music has contributed a lot of songs and stars to the entertainment world. Now there's a new one.

Mac Davis may turn out to be the best c-and-w songwriter since the late Hank Williams and possibly the finest performer ever to come out of the backwoods belt.

At the moment, he has a song—"Baby, Don't Get Hooked on Me"—which is his first gold record as a performer. He's already had a few as a writer. Curiously, this first record hit of his own comes with a song that he doesn't much like.

"It's one of the least favorite songs I've written," he says.

It happened on the spur of the recording session. Mac was in the studio, did a few songs, but nothing really soared. His producer, Rick Hall, said that what was needed was a song with a hook in it—in the recording world, a "hook" is a phrase that is repeated over and over.

In frustration, Mac picked up his guitar and sang the first hook phrase he could think of: "Baby, baby, don't get hooked on me." Hall jumped up and down and insisted that Davis record it immediately. And he did the music there and then, went home and wrote the lyrics overnight and added them to the recording the next day.

It's obvious, therefore, that the song is not based on Davis' personal experience, trying to thwart a lovesick girl. But the song may prove to be prophetic.

"I know that now that I'm going big," Davis says, "I may have problems with boppers and groupies. But Sarah (his wife) doesn't have anything to worry about—she doesn't know it, but she doesn't."

Mac Davis
He got the message.

Davis is a good-looking man out of Lubbock, Tex., the son of a small builder and motel operator. Exceptionally bright as a child, he skipped through grammar school so swiftly he was the youngest child in high school.

"Everybody else had beards and their voices had changed," he says, "and I had nothing. All I had was an inferiority complex. To gain attention, I became a hoodlum. I'd steal hubcaps. Start fights. I'd bootleg."

He explains that when he was in high school Texas was dry. In his western part of the state it was fashionable for the boys to dash across to New Mexico, load up on malt liquor and beer, then come back and sell it by the can to the high school swingers.

"There was nothing else to do," he says, "except drive in fast circles around the drive-ins, impressing the girls and scaring the little kids."

At 15 he cut out and went to Atlanta. He tried college but "I was still majoring in beer and ladies, so flunked out." He'd always had a way with music, so started a rock group and did pretty well. Then he got into record promotion and for 5½ years was out of performing entirely.

He began writing again after he got a job in Los Angeles but had no luck at all until he hit with a song for Elvis Presley and did some more for Elvis, winding up with two big Presley hits, "Memories" and the now-classic "In the Ghetto."

Then he started performing again. Now he has more offers and recording dates than he can handle.

He says his only problem is to guard against a swelled head but he thinks he's hit on a method of doing that.

The day "Baby, Don't Get Hooked on Me" hit number one on the charts, he was in his glory. Everybody was calling him to tell him how great he was. He began thinking they were right.

"But that night, about three in the morning," he says, "I woke up in bed. My big old English sheepdog, Blossom, had left a deposit at the foot of my bed. There I was trying to clean that mess out of the shag rug. I believe Blossom was teaching me a lesson so whenever I start to think I'm hot stuff, I think about Blossom's message."

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Television: Some Pros and Cons

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I would like to have some information on the bad effects of watching TV by children who watch to the exclusion of play, homework, socializing and consequent truancy.

Dear Reader—I won't attempt to review all of the different comments that have been made about violence on TV and these problems, but I will say that continually watching TV to the exclusion of normal childhood play can lead to degeneration of the body's normal functions from physical inactivity. A study a few years ago showed that children who were irritable, chronically fatigued, with vague complaints, were found to be chronic TV watchers with very little exercise.

I studied the problem of inactivity in relation to the space program and the expected prolonged weightlessness problems. My colleagues and I learned that inactivity breeds low energy levels. In normal individuals it causes a decrease in the amount of muscle mass. There is a decrease in the formation of red blood cells and a loss of normal water from the body tissues. The heart and circulatory system become "deconditioned." The heart rate is rapid and lacks the normal strength and stamina for reasonable amounts of physical exercise. There are probably adverse metabolic effects as well.

Many TV programs are wonderful, educational experiences. Others are wholesome entertainment. But like other things, there is an optimal amount. The only solution is to turn off the TV at regular intervals and insist on a little more normal, human activity characteristic of growing children.

Dear Dr. Lamb—What would happen if a lung is punctured during a nerve block in the chest area? Would it heal eventually and, if so, how long would it take?

Dear Reader—The lungs are composed of multiple tiny air sacs. If one is punctured the lung behaves somewhat like an inner tube and collapses. Because it is composed of many small air sacs only a portion of those air sacs near the area where the puncture occurred may collapse. This varies depending on how big the tear is and other factors. How much trouble a person has depends on how much collapse of the lung occurs. If just a very small amount of collapse occurs, it may be almost unnoticeable.

The collapse will persist until the tear has healed over then, like an inner tube that has been patched, it can be inflated again and regains its normal function. If the tear is large and the lung is totally collapsed sometimes the normally functioning lung will expand to push against the heart and blood vessels to cause difficulties.

Some people have spontaneous collapse of a lung because a little blister on the surface of the lung bursts. These, too, usually heal spontaneously. Occasionally there is associated bleeding and this requires careful medical management.

Air trapped between the collapsed lung and the chest wall is gradually absorbed as the lung re-expands, however, during the time air is trapped in this space one should not travel by air or take a trip from sea level to altitude. The trapped air between the lung and chest wall will expand with decreased air pressure and can cause increased pressure inside the chest against the heart. This same problem used to arise regularly when air was injected between the lung and the chest wall to induce collapse in treating patients with tuberculosis.

If it is a small puncture it usually doesn't take long for the lung to heal and re-expand—usually a matter of weeks.

Dowd Voices Need For Professionalism

ST. LOUIS— "There is a general feeling among the people of Missouri that their tax dollars are not efficiently utilized", Edward L. Dowd, Democratic candidate for governor, said in a speech in Lafayette County.

Dowd told the audience that the Office of Administration must bring "modern management techniques and a business- line consciousness of costs versus benefits to state government operations," so state government can accomplish its goals as efficiently and effectively as private industry.

To gauge the success of state programs as accurately as industry does, Dowd recommended the use of such modern measures as "performance appraisals, performance and program budgeting and performance auditing."

Dowd also spoke of the need to get from employes the same level of performance which industry expects. "I strongly support and would actively work for the implementation of most of the recommendations of the 'Little Hoover' Commission in the area of personnel administration. We need to obtain maximum service for our money from our employes."

In order to encourage good state employes to stay on the job, Dowd said, "We need to create a career service for state employes. Presently, too many good employes working for state government jump to the federal government or private industry because they see greater opportunities for advancement there. This is wasteful and inefficient.

"When we invest money in an employe to train him for a job, we should provide a visible avenue of promotion to keep him in the state's service. This would end the role of state government as a training ground for private industry and the federal government.'.

Dowd also favors "providing fringe benefits for state employes similar to those provided by most private employers in the state; insulating state employes from the political process" so that their jobs are not dependent on support of a particular candidate; and equalizing salaries paid by the separate state divisions for similar work.

In this way, employes are discouraged from the practice of moving from one division to another in search of a better salary for the same work.

To make sure that employes are working effectively, Dowd called for "regular evaluations of each employe's performance. Should it not be up to par, corrective conferences should be conducted. On the other hand, should an employe be doing a good job, he should be recognized and regarded."

Dowd concluded by saying "I know that what Missourians want is efficient and professional services rendered as quickly as possible with a minimum of red tape. That will be a priority goal of the Dowd Administration.

Hearnes To Be Keynote Speaker

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will bring the keynote address at the sixth annual Governor's Conference on Agriculture to be held Nov. 19-21 at Ramada Inn.

The annual meeting was initiated by Gov. Hearnes in 1967 as a "forum for farm and agri- business leaders to explore the problems and potential of Missouri agriculture." He will address the group at a dinner on Monday evening, Nov. 20.

The new governor to be elected Nov. 7 -- either Democrat Edward L. Dowd or Republican Christopher (Kit) Bond (Rep.) -- is scheduled to be the featured speaker at Monday's luncheon.

Other personalities already committed to be on the program include William Galbrieth of Washington, D. C., deputy secretary of the U. S. Department of Agriculture; Daniel M. Dalrymple of New York, agricultural consultant to the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in Washington, D. C.; Commissioner Dexter D. Davis, Missouri Department of Agriculture; and Miss Jeanne Thurman, MDA's "Farmer's Daughter."

Patrol Arrests 100,000 Violators

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri State Highway Patrol made over 100,000 arrests during the first eight months of this year for various violations of the law.

In its summary of operations for January through August of 1972, the Patrol reported it made 102,116 arrests during this period. These arrests were for felonies and misdemeanors of all types.

Included in the number of arrests made by the highway patrol during the reported period are 1,355 non- motor vehicle felony arrests. Classified under these arrests are such crimes as felonious assault, burglary, carrying concealed weapons, stealing over 50 dollars (not motor vehicle) and murder.

Motor vehicle felony arrests by the patrol during the eight-month period totaled 554. Arrests in this category include such offenses as stealing a motor vehicle, leaving the scene of an accident, tampering with a motor vehicle and intoxicated driving — third offense.

A total of 2,974 arrests was also made by the highway patrol during the first eight months of 1972 for such violations of the law as destruction of property, firearm violations, gambling, stealing underfifty dollars, liquor law violations and disturbing the peace.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol also reported in its summary of operations for the first eight months that members of the department investigated 24,875 traffic accidents, recovered 664 stolen cars and rendered 135,819 services and first aid to the public.

What's The Law?

The Case Of The Well-Stalked Damsel

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

While Mortimer had plenty of assets, they didn't compare to the assets of his shapely girl friend Hilda. While she carried her assets with her, however, Mortimer kept most of his in his library safe.

One day, Mortimer pointed to his safe and told Hilda that he was giving her a gift of all the diamonds the safe contained. Whereupon, she thanked him with a million kisses and left the room. Unfortunately, Mortimer never returned. He died shortly thereafter.

Upon learning of her benefactor's death, Hilda immediately requested possession of all the diamonds in the safe. The executor of Mortimer's estate, however, merely smiled.

"But they're mine," insisted the girl. "Mortimer specifically gave them to me."

"Nonsense," replied the executor. "They never left the safe. So how could Mortimer have given them to you? While you may have prospected Mortimer, you've got no prospect of getting the diamonds from me."

Bouncing angrily out of the room, Hilda took her claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give Hilda the diamonds contained in the safe?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that there is no gift unless there is a delivery and an acceptance of the thing being given. In this case, concluded the judge, there was no delivery of the diamonds.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more. (John 8:11)

PRAYER Father, I have been very irritated with certain ones around me. I have not accepted them. I have been trying to make them over. Give me Thy love and compassion to build bridges from my life to theirs. In Jesus' name. Amen.

? Consumer's Question Box

Q. I don't understand the labeling of canned hams, because the labeled weight is never what the ham inside really weighs. Is this illegal?

A. When you check the weight on a canned ham lable, remember that it includes the weight of the natural cooked-out juices and gelatin. The reason for including the juices is that they already exist in the ham and are part of it as the ham is cooked in the can. The juices are composed of cooked-out meat proteins and fat. With the gelatin they become part of the actual food in the can. There is a difference between meats cooked in the can, and meats cooked separately and canned after cooking. In the latter, the drained weight is used on the label.

Radios To Broadcast Election Returns

NEW YORK (AP) — A week from today, four radio networks linked to nearly 2,500 stations across the country will start flashing election night results throughout the nation.

Most of the attention will be on the television reports, but radio's method of covering the national vote will be the same.

There'll be computer projections of who won what races, learned analyses of how we voted and why and remote broadcasts from as many as 33 separate locations with the cries of winners and losers alike.

For radio's elders — anyone who recalls "Allen's Alley" — all this is a far cry from the seat-of-the-pants prognostications of 1948, when there was a long, long wait to learn President Harry S. Truman was indeed going back to the White House for four more years.

And it's an even longer way from the 1920 model, when the first radio coverage of a presidential election came from station KDKA in Pittsburgh, Pa. The coverage, among other things, asked if anybody was listening.

There's no question these days whether the news is being heard. The main problem of today's radio is that television and the speed of the computer have stolen most of the election night thunder.

Despite that, radio still is in there pitching. And its means of getting the news out in 1972 has become incredibly sophisticated.

ABC, for example, is broadcasting the Nov. 7 results on each of its four sub-networks. It has eight anchormen reporting the vote on the ABC "information," "entertainment," "contemporary" and "FM" networks.

At CBS radio, as on CBS television, there'll be two anchormen and four regional correspondents. NBC radio will have two anchormen for the overall report and two correspondents watching the gubernatorial, Senate and key House races.

plants.

It would provide a healthful and well appreciated change of atmosphere for both the student and the instructor.

Scavenger hunt-type tests could be designed to use the center more effectively.

Certain "natural" animal populations could be introduced into the center to be studied and experimented with.

Those students doing work with insects would find it an asset to have the center, since greater diversity of plants will assure one of a correspondingly diverse group of insects.

Facilities could be added to the "living laboratory" in the future. A work center for students to study specimens could be provided, along with a protective fence to retain experimental animals and to keep vandals out.

Supervisory Board Named To Oversee Cease-Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diplomatic sources say the United States and North Vietnam have agreed to resume negotiations that could lead to a cease-fire in Indochina by Sunday.

These sources, members of the foreign diplomatic corps, said South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu could be expected to sign the agreement, despite Saigon's strident statements in recent days.

The State Department would not comment on these reports. But Harry Dent, one of President Nixon's key political advisers, said Monday night he doubts any settlement can be reached within a week's time.

"There will be no push to end the war immediately on our part, and I don't think there is any way it can come before Nov. 7," Dent told newsmen in Atlanta Monday night. "There are still some important things unsettled ...."

When word of the impending peace agreement broke last week, North Vietnam demanded that the United States be prepared to sign the papers Oct. 31, Paris time. But White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters Monday "we would not sign such an agreement until the conditions are right."

Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's chief foreign-policy adviser, announced last week that "peace is at hand" but added that one more negotiating session of three or four days would be necessary to nail down details of the proposed cease-fire agreement.

Kissinger said the time and place for such a final session are up to Hanoi, and Nixon administration officials said Monday there is no word from North Vietnam about the next round of talks.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Indonesia, Hungary, Canada and Poland are being named to an international supervisory control commission to oversee the cease-fire in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

The commission would succeed the International Control Commission—chaired by India with Poland and Canada as members—that was set up to oversee implementation of the Geneva accords in Indochina.

In Saigon, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker conferred with President Thieu for an hour today in a session apparently aimed at resolving differences in the draft peace agreement.

Thieu's chief aide, Hoang Duc Nha, told newsmen that the timing of a cease-fire is up to the communist side. But if Kissinger meets with the North Vietnamese again, Nha said, "then he will have to come back here ....

"It is clear that Dr. Kissinger must explain our position to the North Vietnamese and then each side must consult with its allies."

Nha denied any U.S. pressure for Saigon to sign the agreement worked out by Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris.

Living Laboratory Proposed Here

By DAVID ZIEGENHORN

An innovation in the teaching of natural sciences, "the living laboratory", will bring the study of ecology within walking distance of the Sikeston High School classroom, if approved by the board of education.

Biology instructor Murray Sullivan has proposed to the board and the department of curriculum that any or all of a seven - acre area of wooded land located along South Ingram Road between Ables Road and Virginia Street, be used as a "resource center" or "living laboratory".

The section of land is ideal in many respects, he said. In a letter to the board, Sullivan pointed out many of its favorable aspects.

The location is within walking distance from the high school and Matthews Elementary School, as well as being on the same section of land as the proposed eighth and ninth grade student center, Sullivan said.

The other schools in the system would also be close enough to the area that a bus field trip could easily be conducted during a single class period.

The land already belongs to the school system, according to Ernest Elledge, head of the department of curriculum.

A SEVEN-ACRE plot of land may be used as a natural laboratory for students in the Sikeston school system if approved by the board of education. It is located just south of Public School Stadium.

Elledge added that this wooded area has been used as a source for many of the young trees landscaping the senior high campus. Controlled removal of young trees could provide the school system with future landscaping plants, he said.

In Sullivan's letter to the school board, he outlined a number of uses for the center:

It could be used for general biology or general science field trips for all grade levels.

For bird studies and botanical field trips in which different plant types could be identified and studied by means of leaves, stems, buds, flowers and fruit.

As a place where plant and animal experiments could be designed and conducted that would be otherwise too bulky or large in scope for the greenhouse and animal room. An example would be exercises in budding and grafting of

Stabbing, Shooting Suspects Bound Over

NEW MADRID — James Bradley, 65, and Thomas Jenkins, 25, both of Malden, were bound over to Circuit Court Monday under $2,000 bond each after waiving preliminary hearing on felony charges in Magistrate Court.

AMERICA'S BLACK POETS

Black America has produced a remarkable number of excellent poets. Yet the only black author of verse known to most Americans is Muhammad Ali. The title of James Weldon Johnson's poem "O Black and Unknown Bards" could serve as an epitaph for almost all the black poets born in this country. "Because most blacks and whites were ignorant of the eternal contribution of Africa to mankind's achievement, because most were unaware that black men in Latin America had become leading figures in politics and the arts, most Americans have, until very recently, felt somewhat uncomfortable about blacks being poets," writes Alan Lomax, editor of the anthology 3000 Years of Black Poetry.

Lucy Terry, a free Negro living in New England during the 18th century, is regarded as the first American black poet. "An Evening Thought" (1760), by Jupiter Hammon, was the first well known literary work by a black published in the United States. Hammon's poems were religious and showed remarkable rhyming skill for an unschooled slave. An anthology called Les Cenelles was published in 1845 by a dozen French-speaking, free blacks living in Louisiana. But these men did not "link themselves personally with the condition of the slaves and their poetry scarcely touched racial feeling," writes Arna Bontemps in the introduction to the definitive anthology, The Poetry of the Negro, which she edited with Langston Hughes.

Paul Laurence Dunbar was the most widely known Negro writer of the 19th century; he has been called the first outstanding black author. Dunbar's poems, many written in Negro dialect, have been critized for portraying a rather idealic picture of plantation life. But his sentimental portraits reflected the tastes of his age rather than any insensitivity to the problems faced by black Americans. The Harlem Renaissance of the 1920s produced America's most famous black poets -- Langston Hughes, Claude McKay and Countee Cullen. Their poems reflected a new sense of pride and racial consciousness which characterized the work of black writers after the first World War. Another form of black poetry emerged during the Twenties -- the blues, folk poetry set to music.

The past decade has witnessed a tremendous outpouring of black pride and a growing interest in the black arts. The long tradition of black poetry is finally being investigated by both blacks and whites, and new voices, such as Don Lee, Larry Neal and Clarence Major, are attracting sizable audiences. One of the most powerful figures on the current black poetry scene is Nikki Giovanni. Her record album, "Truth Is On The Way," in which she reads her poetry to the accompaniment of gospel music, is part of an oral poetry movement which hopes to bring poetry to the people. Jean - Paul Sartre has said that Negro poetry is "the true revolutionary poetry" of the time, something that transcends race. The visions of truth and life reflected in the works of black poets offer something for all men.

OUR HUMAN NATURE

The office philosopher has come up with this paradox:

No matter how difficult your job is, after a while it becomes easier.

No matter how easy your job is, after a while it becomes more difficult.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Memories are like the seasons of the year.

They are recurrent miracles and each has its own pageantry.

The more memories you have to summon up on the days when your heart needs a little cheer, the more fortunate your life has been.

You've been exposed to a lot of living yourself if you can look back and remember when —

Before the women's liberation movement made the feminine sex so serious and self-conscious, girls rather liked being called chicks.

It was considered indelicate to speak of your glands in mixed company.

A jewelry store always kept in the window a clock that had been wound up and told you the right time.

A man outdoors without a hat on looked funny.

It was so unusual for anyone to drink anything except straight whisky that when anyone ordered a Martini he met a barful of sneers, and the bartender would tell his wife later when he got home, "I don't know what the world's coming to."

Men who chewed tobacco or smoked cigars looked down on younger men who smoked cigarettes as weaklings or worse.

No woman who valued her reputation would think of going out in public unless she was firmly girdled by the sanctuary of a tight-fitting corset.

The only thing most people knew about the planet Mars was that it had canals on it — and now that has turned out to be wrong.

Any political candidate who wore sideburns was regarded as a leftover relic from the 19th century.

Everyone felt the neighborhood would go down when the first guy in the block let it be known that he had put one of those new-fangled rumpus rooms in his basement.

A man could go through his whole life and never buy more than one pair of shoes or one necktie in a single day.

Children were just the opposite of what many are today. Then they had dirty ears and clean minds.

Those were the days — remember?

MAJOR SCHOOL FINANCE PLANS DOMINATE STATE TAX PICTURE

Legislatures in 21 of the 41 states holding sessions this year have or will consider tax increase proposals totaling $7 billion annually, according to a national survey by Tax Foundation, Inc.

Bulk — $4.5 billion — of the unusually high election year total comes from initial proposals in three states for statewide financing of public schools. While many states are bracing for court-ordered restructuring of school finance, formal proposals for the new state taxes required seem most likely to be considered this year in California, the Foundation said. All three proposals involve a measure of off-setting local property tax relief.

The remaining $2.5 billion in tax increases to cover state spending plans compares to the $2 billion proposed in 1970. Last year 30 states adopted new and increased taxes expected to yield a record $5 billion annually. The Foundation estimates state tax receipts in fiscal year 1972 at $57 billion. They were $23 billion in fiscal 1962.

Legislatures in 15 states have or will consider a variety of major tax proposals — in Alaska, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas Kentucky, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia and Washington. Lesser measures were up for discussion in Florida, Idaho, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri and Utah.

Three of the 10 states remaining without a broad-based personal income tax were to consider its adoption — New Hampshire, New Jersey and Washington. South Dakota has again rejected the tax.

Eight states will consider increasing yields from their personal income taxes and eight from corporation income taxes.

Proposals in at least a dozen states would boost revenue from sales and use taxes.

Drivers may be paying a one or two-cent increase in gasoline taxes in 11 states. Smokers in 11 states face the probability of cigarette tax increases, some as healthy as 50 or 100 per cent.

Drinkers in five states may see the reflection, as New Yorkers already have, of higher state taxes on alcoholic beverages.

THANKS TO A DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS

Thanks to a Democratic controlled Congress, both House and Senate last week overrode a veto by President Nixon of a 24.6 billion dollar water pollution control bill. The new law sets a national goal of pollution-free waters in our nation for not later than 1885.

Its passage will bring benefits to every county and possibly every city and town in the nation, most of which are dangerously troubled with poisonous waters.

It's defeat would have brought health hazards and critical water supply conditions to most of them, but it would have benefited the wealthy industrialists who do not want to spend the money to keep their wastes out of the nations water. The veto was typical of President Nixcn, who has favored the wealthy at the expense of the rest of us.

Wonder if he'll now send out a letter like he did on the Social Security hike, seeking to take credit for the law that will benefit millions of today and untold millions of tommorrow.

'You Don't Try Voltaire'

For publishing two anti-police articles in "L'Idiot International," French author Simone De Beauvoir has been charged with libel. Like her colleague, existentialist Jean Paul Sartre, she faces a year of imprisonment and a $54,000 fine for allegedly defaming the forces of law and order by writing that they used "systematic torture and brutality" during student demonstrations.

The fact that there is such a law on the book says a lot about the fragile state of press freedom throughout the so-called free world. The fact that authorities are willing to use this law to try two internationally renowned citizens says a lot about modern France.

As in the United States, it is reported that public opinion in France is running strongly in favor of law and order and against indulgence. But, as we hopefully learned from the Chicago Seven trial, it would be self-defeating to put expert polemicists on trial and thus give them a major public forum. The late President Charles de Gaulle understood this well when he rejected advice during the Algerian war to arrest Mr. Sartre for his open sympathy with the liberation front. "You don't try Voltaire," he said.

THERE'S A MORAL TO THIS STORY!

A man was bragging to his friends about the unbelievable things his dog could co.

"I can even send him on errands for me. He never fails. Here, I'll prove it."

Whereupon he placed a five dollar bill in Rover's teeth and instructed him to go around the corner to Sweeney's bar and get two good cigars.

"And don't forget to bring back the change," he added.

His unbelieving friends starting giving him the horse laugh when the dog didn't return after 20 minutes. They all went to Sweeney's bar to find the dog. Sure enough, there sat old Rover at a table with a female dog having a drink. The proud owner was broken hearted.

"Rover!" he exlcaimed. "How can you embarrass me in front of my friends like this? I give you a five dollar bill and send you on a simple errand. Here I find you drinking and carousing around with a female dog. You've never done anything like this before!"

"First time I ever had any money," replied the dog.

OUR VETERANS

The nation paused briefly on October 23 to pay homage to its men and women who have served in the armed forces. It was the least we could do. The rolls of our heroes from the days of the American Revolution to Vietnam have mushroomed into the millions. During the course of our turbulent history, many of our brave men have made the supreme sacrifice. They died in the tradition of freedom. Theirs was a noble cause.

Veterans Day was legally created by the Congress to remind us of the tribute we owe all our veterans. For years, we paused at 11 a.m. on November 11 to pray and pay tribute to those who had fought so gallantly in World War I. The advent of separate endings of World War II brought into focus the need for national observance of the end of all wars and an outpouring of thanks to veterans who had served so faithfully. The bitter memories of Korea and later Vietnam have reemphasized our debt to the veterans of service in the U.S. Armed Forces. Whatever the shortcomings of our leaders in the times of mortal conflicts, the serviceman has come through. He has been our salvation.

It is a matter of record that we have had some narrow escapes. There are Valley Forge, Pearl Harbor, the rout in Korea before General Douglas MacArthur set things right, and the Tet offensive inVietnam. Each time, our armed forces were equal to the occasion. They bailed us out. Now the great majority of those heroes are in the ranks of veterans, living or dead. A grateful nation has saluted them on Veterans' Day. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON– One of President Nixon's favorite labor leaders, who has been inducted into the Republican holy of holies, is under double— barreled federal investigation.

Both the Justice and Labor departments are looking into the doings of Kenneth T. Lyons, a tough and talkative union boss now serving as national vice chairman of Democrats for Nixon. Justice is studying whether he committee perjury in a Mafia— related case, and Labor is investigating charges that he misused union funds.

Lyons heads not only the 100,000— strong National Association of Government Employees but, embarrassingly for him in the present circumstances, the 30,000— member International Brotherhood of Police Officers.

But while government gumshoes have been checking on Lyons, President Nixon has been courting him. The President has appointed him to the prestigious White House higher education advisory council and has invited him to at least two White House affairs.

As an officer of Democrats for Nixon, Lyons also attended the exclusive Texas barbecue which ex— Treasury Secretary John Connally threw for Nixon. But Lyons's entree to the councils of the mighty hasn't deterred the federal sleuths.

His trouble with the Justice Department began last June with Senate testimony about a detergent called Poly— Clean. The product, according to the Senate testimony, is linked to a Mafia family with a record for strong— arm business tactics.

--Incriminating Vouchers--

The detergent's maker, David Weiner of Palmer, Mass., was called on the witness stand. His testimony and vouchers he produced showed that, at Lyons's request, he made four trips to Boston to discuss Poly— Clean. One of their lunch and dinner companions, the vouchers show, was Tony Camerota. He is a nephew of the late Nick Camerota, who was the Mafia godfather for western Massachusetts until his recent demise.

Finally, the vouchers tell of an agreement between Weiner and Lyons for distributing Poly— Clean through a company called "Noreast Sales Corporation."

Talks about the deal lasted for hours, the vouchers attest.

After Weiner's damning statements, Lyons demanded to testify before the committee. He appeared without a lawyer to deny all the allegations. He swore he didn't know Camerota, had never heard of Noreast Sales Corporation and couldn't recall Weiner's "ever buying me a cup of coffee."

Lyons also testified that he had met with Weiner twice, not four times, that Weiner had tried to get him to push Poly— Clean, but that he had rejected the deal.

The Senate record was so shot with contradictions that it was referred to the Justice Department for possible perjury prosecutions. Within the last few days, the Senate has also sent Justice an article from the Boston Globe identifying two new prospective witnesses in the case.

As for the probe into Lyons's alleged misuse of union funds, the charges were brought by union dissidents. The Labor Department will confirm only that the investigation deals with "financial affairs."

We reached Lyons in Boston for his comments. He talked at length without notes, repeating the same detailed denial he had given under oath to the senators. "The thing is so unreal," he said of the Poly— Clean case. "It comes as a complete mystery to me." On the alleged misuse of funds, he was "confident" he would be cleared.

Weiner, in an earlier talk with my associate Les Whitten, said he ran a clean company with no Mafia ties. He also stuck to his Senate testimony.

It may take the courts to resolve the conflicting stories.

--Looking To 1976

A number of Democratic hopefuls, anticipating George McGovern's defeat next week, are already jockeying for positions in the 1976 presidential sweepstakes.

They include three of the Senate's most able and articulate members— Indiana's Birch Bayh, Idaho's Frank Church and Minnesota's Walter Mondale. All three have told friends, however, that they will step aside if Sen. Ted Kennedy seeks the nomination.

McGovern is also expected to make a second bid if he isn't too badly mauled by the voters on November 7. But he might have trouble simply keeping his Senate seat, since he must come up for re— election in 1974 in conservative South Dakota.

McGovern's two vice presidential choices, Tom Eagleton and Sargent Shriver, are also making presidential noises in private. But Eagleton wouldn't likely challenge Kennedy and certainly Shriver will give his eminent brother— in— law first crack at the nomination.

The big question mark is whether Kennedy will run. He has told intimates that he's definitely interested but hasn't made up his mind.

Inside Labor

Labor's Unseen Fight: Union Chiefs United In Low Visibility Election Drive For Congressional Control

WASHINGTON — It may be sacrilege this time of the year to believe, but there's one scoreboard which totes more significance than what the Athletics did to the Reds, or what's in the future for the Giants, the Jets, the Oilers, the Steelers, the Raiders, et al. It is the score quietly kept in labor's innermost executive suite on how friendly "during a political lifetime" some of the nation's most powerful men have been on "the Hill."

These powerful men, second really only to the President, are the chairmen of some 16 potent committees which dominate the Congress and a long string of subcommittees such as Sen. Ted Kennedy's section of the Judiciary Committee which he has used to batter and "investigate the hell out of " the opposition.

These committee chairmen control the nation's lawmaking. They are the guardians, as now made up, of labor's national strength. Virtually all of them are pro-labor. If by coattail magic the Republicans and some conservative allies control the Congress as a result of the Nov. 7 election, labor will have but two "friendlies" chairing the Congressional committees which have protected the unions and their leaders for decades.

Ted Kennedy, for example, would lose the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure with which he has hit at Republicans, Richard Nixon and business. He would also lose the Labor and Public Welfare Committee's Subcommittee on Health's top chair from which he is directing his nationalized health-care drive.

Add to this, say, the replacement by a conservative Republican of labor's ally, Congressman Ray Madden, as incoming chairman of the pivotal Rules Committee. This body is the 'traffic cop" of the House of Representatives.

This group is not as all-powerful as it once was, but it is almost impossible to get a bill out on the floor for voting without its approval. It can still obstruct, delay or even kill House action on major legislation. Party leaders and chairmen of other legislative committees are dependent on this Rules Committee to clear vital bills for the House floor so they can be debated and voted on.

In this Congress its chairman is Mississippi's William Colmer. Labor scores him at 109 to 4 – that is, during his tenure he voted "wrong" according to the labor chiefs 109 times and "right" only four times.

He's retiring. If the liberal-labor- Democratic alliance carries the House Election Day, he will be replaced by veteran Congressman Ray Madden of Gary, Ind. One of the men who can speak for labor leader George Meany says of Madden: "He is a real proven friend." He is close to the United Steelworkers. And he would give the liberal-labor coalition control of the Rules Committee for the first time in 45 years. His voting score is 118 right on labor's board.

That's why labor is spending millions of dollars quietly in a drive to win a series of marginal House and Senate races. That's why Meany directed the labor controlled black A. Philip Randolph Institute to work for laberal pro- labor candidates only in the marginal districts.

It is the strategy of Meany, as well as those who are not neutral but are pouring it on for McGovern, to unite in the fight for a pro-labor Congress.

The switch of merely five seats in the Senate -- and perhaps four -- would give the Senate to the Republicans who could then "organize" it and name committee chairmen.

Already, on an ideological basis, the labor-conservative margins are close. On Feb.8, a motion to make arbitration compulsory in all transportation industries was killed. But a switch of only two votes would have passed it.

Had this become law it would have, in effect, ended strikes of Teamsters, and air, rail and maritime workers.

And if the non-labor bloc in the House had been able to switch 10 votes out of 435, the conservatives would have been able to ban the issuance of food stamps and probably unemployment insurance and welfare payments to strikers -- a goal of managements' labor law reform organizations. Several years ago, General Electric strikers received $25 million in public welfare benefits, and General Motors employes, $30 million.

But it is the structure of the committees labor watches and is out on the hustings fighting to keep under the chairmanship of those who have the "right" score.

For example, the critical Ways and Means Committee chairman, Wilbur Mills, whom labor would have supported for President. His score – 64, right, 51 wrong. He would be replaced by Republican Herman Schneebeli, whose score is 76 wrong and 8 right. The heavy-spending House Public Works Committee is chaired by John Blatnik, labor score: 115 right, 5 wrong. He would be replaced by Republican William Harsha, score: 70 wrong, 11 right.

Or the priceless House Education and Labor Committee. Chairman is Carl Perkins,Ky., who has voted right 112 times, wrong 9 times. He would be replaced by either Albert Quie, 78 wrong and 16 right; or conservative John Ashbrook, 73 wrong and 6 right by labor's count.

There are other vital committees which control America's destiny and the balance of power on the labor-management front. Which could make or break the power to strike, which would control the flow -- and types -- of social laws.

Labor keeps that lifetime score on all Congressmen. Few others do.

Labor forays out and fights for its people and power. Few others do.

Burlison Record Criticized

By RON PORTER

What do you do with a Congressman who doesn't want the voters to look at his record and who votes both ways on bills so he can tell different members of his constituency that he voted the way they wanted him to?

M. Francis (Frank) Svendrowski says you vote him out of office. Svendrowski is the Farmington Republican running against incumbent Cape Girardeau Democrat Bill D. Burlison for the 10th District Congressional seat.

He brought his campaign to Sikeston Monday.

Svendrowski says that in a face- to- face debate at Fox Junior High School in Arnold, Burlison asked the voters not to look at his record. He reportedly said the record of a Congressman is extremely complex and cannot be understood by the average person. Burlison told those at the meeting that to look at his record would only confuse and mislead voters, Svendrowski said.

Svendrowski said that in a recent television interview, Burlison said he should be re-elected so he can reveal crimes and corruption in government. He cited his background as prosecuting attorney of Cape Girardeau County.

Svendrowski said that for the 21 months Burlison was prosecuting attorney, he didn't prosecute much of anything. He ran for Congress while receiving a full-time salary from the county. Most of the cases went unprosecuted, Svendrowski says, including the case of the County Collector who allegedly embezzled $30,000.

Svendrowski said what Burlison was really saying was that the average person is incapable of voting intellegently and should not event attempt to understand his record.

Svendrowski also cited two contradictory votes by Burlison. He said Burlison voted against busing to achieve racial intergration and then turned around and voted for a bill authorizing funds to be used for busing. On June 27 he voted for the anti- ballistic missile system, and then the same day voted against funds to build it.

Svendrowski is a Conservative Republican who feels the federal government is overburdened. He says many programs should be returned to local level governmental units.

A supporter of President Richard Nixon, he says he was happy to hear the President say the federal government must give up some of its powers.

"Government should not attempt to do for people those things which they are capable of doing for themselves," Svendrowski said.

MRS. CAROLYN BOND, left, wife of Republican gubernatorial candidate Christopher (Kit) Bond, visited Sikeston Monday in an effort to assist her husband in his campaign. Scott County Republican chairman Fred Steward Jr., center, and Charles Matthews, both of Sikeston, greeted Mrs. Bond and her news secretary, Linda Brown.

Former Sikeston Man Credited With Saving Two Lives

HASTINGS, Neb.-- Immediate action by KHAS Radio News Director Michael Lee was credited with possibly saving the lives of an elderly brother and sister on Oct. 24, when a fire caused moderate damage to their Good Samaritan Village apartment.

Formerly of Sikeston, Mo., Lee graduated from Sikeston High School in 1963 and from Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, Mo., in 1967.

He is the son of Mrs. Ronald Lee of 314 Hardin, Sikeston.

He was band director for Richland High School at Essex, Mo., for three years and was also news director for KSIM Radio Station in Sikeston before moving to Hastings early in 1971.

Lee heard the radio alarm for the fire given over the monitor in his car in Hastings and arrived at the scene before firemen.

Neighbors told Lee that the apartment had been evacuated, but when calls for help were heard from inside the apartment, Lee entered.

He found Edna Wilkey and her brother Fred trapped in the bedroom.

She was led to safety but her brother, paralyzed from the waist down, was carried outside by Lee just as firemen arrived.

The source of the blaze was traced to brooms stored next to a hot water heater in a utility room.

7 Treated Monday

Seven accident patients were treated Monday in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Robert Johnson, 22, Sikeston, bruised face when tripped on steps; Joe Drury, 21, Cape Girardeau, injured back in fall; Robert Blackmon, 21, Benton, received first and second degree burns to left hand at work.

Margaret Rowe, 41, Howardville, bruised right hip in car accident; Valentine Wilkins, 64, Morehouse, received muscle sprain of right rib cage in fall; J. W. Smith, 37, East Prairie, cut scalp when hit by piece of lumber; and Clemons Scheffer, 37, Sikeston, injured left hip in car accident.

Man Charged In Shotgunning

NEW MADRID — Howard Hinsley, 41, of Tallapoosa has been charged with felonious assault by shotting Terry Chaney, 23, of Tallapoosa Friday in the legs with a .410-gauge shotgun.

Hinsley is being held under $5,000 bond for appearance in Circuit Court after waiving preliminary hearing Monday in Magistrate Court.

Carolyn Bond Tells Of State Campaign

By DONNA SATTERFIELD

Mrs. Carolyn Bond, wife of Christopher S. (Kit) Bond, Republican gubernatorial candidate, visited Sikeston Monday.

Before coming to Sikeston, the vitality and energy of Mrs. Bond had found her in Jefferson County meeting residents of High Ridge, House Springs, Murphy and Fenton.

She said she met a Jefferson County man who said he hadn't registered to vote because he didn't know anything about the candidates and didn't think a person should vote unless he knew what he was voting for. Mrs. Bond asked the man how long he had lived in Missouri and he replied that he had lived here four years.

"It's rather sad, isn't it?" she asked.

Mrs. Bond has recently been traveling around the state talking to residents about their concerns. Since March, she has visited all 114 counties and made over 275 talks to college groups, women's clubs and even men's civic groups.

When asked if she has met any hecklers, she replied that there have been none and she has been given a very good reception everywhere.

Of the 23 mental health institutions operated by the Missouri Division of Health, Mrs. Bond has visited 22 and will visit the last one today in Nevada. She visited Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic in August.

Mrs. Bond believes the Bootheel area to be Democratic territory, but she is enthusiastic about her husband's chances here and everywhere in the state.

"More and more people are voting for the man, not the ticket. I personally feel it is wrong to vote a straight ticket if one knows not all of the men are qualified." She said the young people are especially voting for the man and the issues, and that many older people are following suit.

She eagerly declared that Bond was ahead in the recent polls and added that he is ahead two to one in mock college elections. "I just hope they vote," she added.

Mrs. Bond left Sikeston for Poplar Bluff and, from there, went to Chamois where she was scheduled to speak at a Republican rally.

Mrs. Bond received her bachelor's degree in speech and hearing therapy and her master's degree in guidance and counseling from University of Kentucky at Lexington.

Police Seek Youths For Flipped Volks

Two youth have been charged with peace disturbance and three others are being sought by police in connection with an incident Monday night in which an automobile was overturned about 11 p.m.

Police say Bill Boshears Jr., 18, of 103 Selma, and Jack Lee Beckwith, 18, of 608 Blanton are being charged with peace disturbance, after Beckwith allegedly tried to hit Pat Curry of 510 Sikes at the Curry home. Further charges are pending.

Police did not have a damage estimate on the car this morning.

Jack Lavell Cathern, 844 Agnes, was arrested for keeping chickens within the city limits. Police arrested him after they discovered he was raising four of them on his property.

Randy Hatcher was charged with public intoxication; Doris Burlene Swarts, 836 Ruth St., driving while intoxicated and destroying private property; Ruby Harris, 613 Hart St., cashing no account checks; and Daniel Ray Layton of Route Four, careless and imprudent driving.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Joseph Hamm

Hamm-Graviett

ORAN — Guardian Angel Catholic Church was the setting for the Sept. 30 wedding of Miss Carla Graviett and Alan Joseph Hamm at 1 p.m. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Richard Rolwing in the presence of 150 guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Graviett, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Hamm.

The altar was decorated with large baskets of pink and fuchsia carnations. Small candelabras with matching ribbons stood on each side of the altar.

Judy Reichman sang, "We've Only Just Begun," accompanied on the organ by Mary Seyer.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her wedding a formal gown of Polyester organza with scalloped Chantilly lace imported from France. The gown had an empire waist with an A-line skirt and long train. Tiny, covered buttons accented the back. The bodice featured a high neckline edged with stand-up lace. The long, sheer sleeves were also edged with lace which extended down to the wrist. There was a pearl bracelet for carring the train after the ceremony.

For her hair, she chose a profile cape of Chantilly lace, outlined in pearls and centered with crystals, attached with a three-tiered veil of silk illusion.

She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and pink - and fuchsia - tinted carnations and baby's breath tied with pink ribbons.

Miss Donna Brucker was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of hot pink, double knit with a high, ruffled neckline and long sleeves accented at the wrist with a ruffle. Her hat was a matching color with ribbons. She carried a nosegay of matching pink and fuchsia carnations.

Miss Sharon Scheeter and Misses Pam and Paula Hamm, sisters of the groom, were bridesmaids. They wore dresses of fuchsia double knit made identical to that of the maid of honor.

Flower girl was Melissa Graviett, niece of the bride. She wore a hot pink dress, also identical to the maid of honor. She carried a white lace basket of flowers.

David and Ricky Hamm were candlelighters.

Gary Todt was best man.

Buddy Griffin, Jerome Eftink and Denny Graviett, brother of the bride, served as groomsmen. John and Larry Todt were ushers.

Mrs. Graviett chose for her daughter's wedding a beige dress of polyester knit and matching coat and accessories. She wore a pink, rose corsage.

The mother of the groom wore a blue, coat dress and matching accessories. She also wore a pin, rosebud corsage.

Miss Debbie Martin and Miss Sandy Buckheit were at the guest book.

A dinner and reception were held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Oran.

The wedding cake was three-tiered with pink and fuchsia decorations and an angel at the top. Also, matching, bridesmaid, cake dolls were dressed like the bridesmaids.

CAN A CANTOR BELT OUT ROCK?

TORONTO (AP) — The use of folk rock at Jewish religious services was discussed at the 19th American Conference of Cantors held here.

Revisions in the wedding service, music attractive to youth and other ways of adapting traditional religion to the changing times were topics of debate.

Cantor Howard Stahl, a recent graduate of Hebrew Union College in New York, called the use of rock music "a gimmick."

But, said Stahl in an interview, "it's a holding pattern to get them into the synagogues — then you've got a fighting chance."

Ann Landers

Ann's Laundry Not Cleaner Than Neighbors

Dear Ann Landers: As a former resident of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, I was fascinated by your by your statement that when you lived there, more than 20 years ago, you had the whitest wash on Valmont Avenue.

That statement also intrigued a reporter for The University of Wisconsin campus paper who decided to do some digging on her own. This is what she wrote:

"Dear Ann Landers: It wasn't very nice of you to publicly insult your former neighbors in a column that circulates all over the world. I contacted several women who lived near you in those days and this is what they had to say about your claiming the whitest wash on Valmont Avenue:

"Mrs. Wmma Weiss of 1619 Valmont Avenue commented: 'Ann was a wonderful neighbor but I don't recall that her wash was any cleaner than anyone else's.'

"Mrs. Paul Marg of 1610 Valmont said: 'I never paid much attention to my neighbor's wash. I couldn't tell you if Ann's was the cleanest or the dirtiest. But I do remember her as a very sweet and interesting person.'

"Mrs. G. W. Breml of 1618 Valmont recalled: 'Mrs. Lederer (Ann now) was a nice neighbor. She minded her own business.' "

A few others had similar comments but they preferred to remain anonymous. So it seems, Ann, that no one in Eau Claire remembers your wash as well as you do. Borrowing one of your nuggets of advice, I say, "Count your blessings--but make sure they're yours." --- Maggie Menard Of The Spectator

Dear Maggie: I remember every one of those women. They were all good neighbors and they minded their own business, too. I apologize if I insulted their laundry. Will you please go back and give them all my warm regards?

Dear Ann Landers: Now that the great American home wrecker (football) is being glorified on all the networks, will you please relay a message to my husband? There is no chance that I can get his attention until January, but he might listen to you.

Dear Husband: I am fast slipping into a state of depression as I face another season of watching you watch the idiot box as if it were the only thing in life that matters. But then I guess it is. I find it quite remarkable that you chat so easily with the players, whom you don't even know (and who never answer you, of course), while I sit there, the woman who has been married to you for 15 years, bore you three healthy, beautiful children, and I could drop dead on front ou your eyes and you wouldn't even notice.

I find it fascinating that you can call each and every player by name. You know where they were born and how much they weigh. I am certain you do not know how much your own children weigh and at this point I wouldn't bet that you could call them by name.

For the last three Thanksgivings you have not come to the table to eat with us. Christmas and New Year's it was the same story. When your children grow up they will remember that you ignored them. Nature has a strange way of paying people back. When you want their love and affection, they will tell you to get lost.--- The Girl In Your Wedding Picture. Remember Me?

Dear Girl: I'm printing this in October in the hope that things will brighten up around your house before the holidays. Thanks for writing.

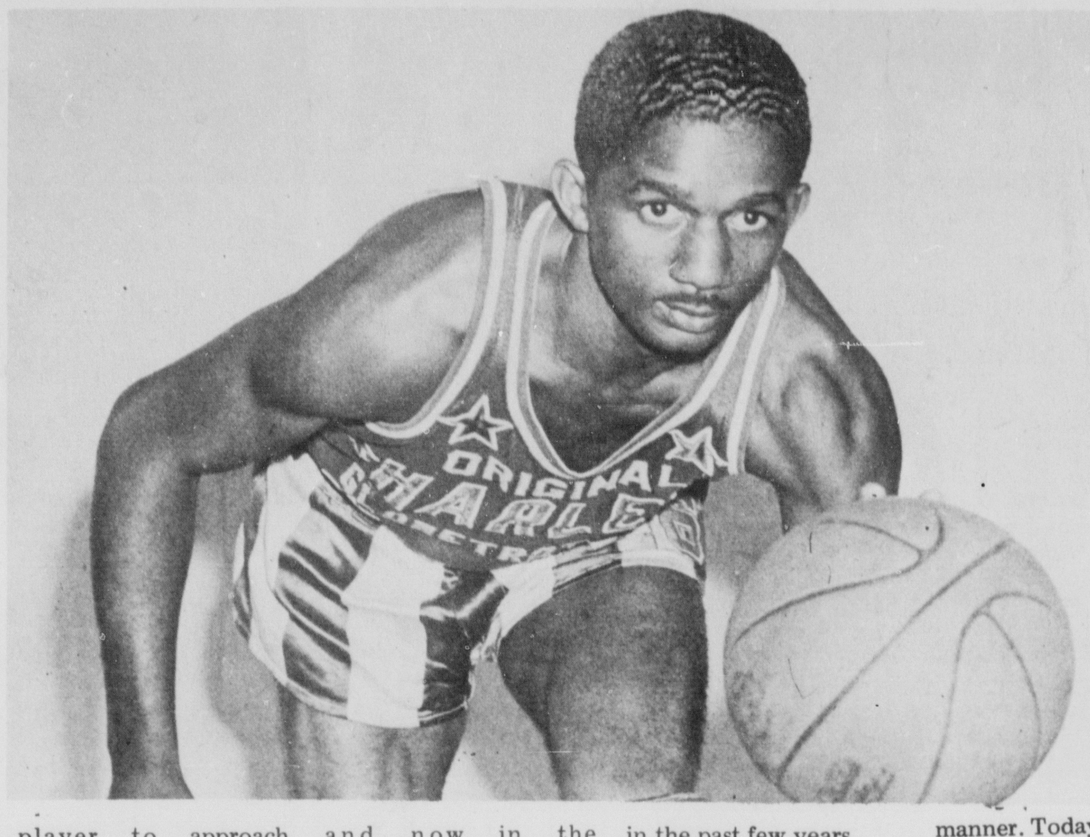
Haynes Brings Troops To SHS



Few American athletes can be recognized away from their own country.

Harlem Globetrotter star and all-time basketball great Marques Haynes is as popular in Paris, France as he is in Paris, Tex.

The Globetrotter standout, who will be in action with his Trotter teammates Nov. 8 at Sikeston High School Field House, was playing high school basketball in the late thirties, and has played college or professional ball every year since.

Last year Haynes was invited to be a guest instructor at an international coaching clinic, held in conjunction with the Amateur Basketball Championships in Yugoslavia. "If a popularity contest had been held," reported one of the international coaches in attendance, "Marques would have won by a landslide."

But popularity is nothing new for Marques Hayes.

When Marques was establishing himself as basketball's first super-star, Babe Ruth was still hitting home runs.

Today, as Hank Aaron becomes the first player to approach Ruth's record, Marques is still going strong.

Although he looks virtually the same as he did the day he graduated from Oklahoma's Langston College, Marques won't admit how old he really is.

"I won't say how old I am," laughs Marques, "but I will say I am the only active player who has played competitive basketball in the thirties, forties, fifties, sixties and now in the seventies."

After traveling a couple million miles, and playing thousands of games in this country and around the world, Haynes can look back on a myriad of memories and experiences.

"I guess the greatest thrill for me has been the opportunity to be a kind of first hand observer of the type of social changes that have occurred in this country in the past few years.

"In many cities the Globetrotters were the first group to play in an integrated building, because we wouldn't play any other way," Marquest says.

"Because we were a black team, we often spent nights sleeping in the car and eating cold sandwiches. And not all those nights were in the South. Today, things have changed. Now we get treated in a first-class manner. Today, if we eat cold sandwiches, it is because we want to eat cold sandwiches. But instead of just reading about such change, I feel fortunate to have actually taken part."

Although everything changes in time, it is nice to know that in at least one area, the world of basketball, one thing remains constant.

That is the uncanny ability of the original Mr. Basketball, Marques Haynes.

Big 8 Coaches On This Week's Games

KANSAS CITY (AP) — All four coaches of the underdogs in Saturday's Big Eight Conference football games say their teams can knock off the favorites.

Colorado Coach Eddie Crowder said Monday the Buffs "are capable of being just as keyed up for Nebraska as we were against Oklahoma." The Buffs upset Oklahoma 20-14 on Oct. 21.

Coach Johnny Majors, who sends his Iowa State club against Oklahoma, said the Cyclones can beat the Sooners.

Vince Gibson, the Kansas State coach whose Wildcats were thrased 52-0 last week by Oklahoma, predicted that "we're going to beat Missouri."

Kansas Coach Don Fambrough, disappointed over last week's 34-8 loss to Iowa State, asserted the Jayhawks "can bounce back" against Oklahoma State.

The coaches made their observations during the weekly Big Eight telephone briefing session.

Crowder, whose Buffs were stunned 20-17 by Missouri last Saturday, said, "I'm confident our men will get fully ready to play" the third-ranked Cornhuskers. "A loss always sits in their stomachs like bad food."

Crowder was high on his praise of Nebraska, however, particularly of the defense which has shut out the last four opponents.

Nebraska's defense is playing with more confidence and abandon than its defense of last year," he said. "And their offensive line is giving Dave Humm as good protection as you can expect in college football."

Nebraska Coach Bob Devaney said Colorado "is a big, strong football team capable of running right at you. They have the personnel to give us an awful lot of trouble."

Majors qualified his statement about beating Oklahoma, the nation's seventh ranked team, saying, "It's going to take our best effort of the year. We have's played anybody as tough."

Chuck Fairbanks, the Oklahoma coach, described 14thranked Iowa State as "on of the best teams in the country. They are playing with a lot of emotion."

Gibson didn't know it at the time but successive upsets over Notre Dame and Colorado have skyrocketed Missouri to 16th in the rankings.

"We're planning on beating Missouri," Gibson reiterated. "We turned our season around at this time last year, and I think we will this year."

Missouri Coach Al Onofrio wasn't about to say the Tigers might be taking the Wildcats lightly despite Kansas State's 52-0 spanking by Oklahoma last week.

"We don't overlook anybody," Onofrio said. "Kansas State has a dangerous football team. Dennis Morrison is a good passer. We got beat by Nebraska 62-0 and then came back and won those two big games."

Fambrough, promising lineup changes that will bring freshmen into the picture, said Robert Miller, a fullback in previous games, will be moved to tailback against the Cowboys. The new starting fullback will be Vince O'Neil.

"Iowa State was the first game we had a lack of effort by our team," Fambrough said. "we're going to go with our kids who want to play. Our running game's hurting us. We've got to move the ball on the ground. We've moved Miller to tailback to get the ball to him more."

Oklahoma State Coach Dave Smith predicted the Jayhawks "will come here with both barrels loaded."

'Let 'em Boo'

DALLAS (AP) — "Let 'em boo," said a satisfied Craig Morton. "When I'm throwing touchdowns and the Dallas Cowboys are winning, I can live without the cheers."

The longtime No. 1 whipping boy when pro football fortunes wilted here, Morton passed for three scores Monday night and set up a fourth in a 28-24 win over the Detroit Lions.

"Sure, I heard them boo when I was introduced," said the 29-year-old Morton. "It's a free country. I'm not telling them who to vote for ... and I'm not telling 'em who to applaud."

Roger Staubach, engineer of Dallas' world championship of 1971, is healed from his preseason shoulder separation. He's ready to play, hungry for a comeback. But, Morton has the job and won't let go.

"As long as Roger and I are in competition, there will be Staubach fans and Morton fans," said the 6-foot-4 Californian. "It's a way of life for me in Dallas, but all I can do is perform."

Morton was a point machine, heaving a 38-yard touchdown bomb to Billy Parks, one of 33 yards to Calvin Hill and a 15yarder to heretofore unknown running back Mike Montgomery.

A 27-yard screen from Morton to Montgomery set up a one-yard touchdown smash by the second-year man who came from San Diego in the deal for the controversial, untalkative, idle Duane Thomas.

Dallas, 5-2, pulled within a game of Washington's Redskins in the National Conference East while Detroit plunged back into a tie at 4-3 with Green Bay in the NFC Central.

Morton was 11 of 19 for 206 yards in a game where Coach Tom Landry's articulate plan was to control the ball and pass less than 20 times.

"Detroit is better on offense than defense," said Morton, "so we tried to play keepaway."

Joe Schmidt, the tough exlinebacker who coaches the Lions, said Dallas' 14 quick points put Detroit in a hole from which it couldn't dig. "We're still tied for first in our division," he said. "I still think we can win it."

Dallas beched its two $60,000a-year wide receivers. Bob Hayes and Lance Alworth didn't unlimber until the final five minutes while two younger fellows, Ron Sellers and Parks, handled the main work.

CLEVELAND—Lenny Wilkens, traded by the Seattle SuperSonics to Cleveland Aug. 23, has finally agreed to report to the Cavaliers.

BOSTON—The Buffalo Braves, down 43 points after three periods, ran the Boston Celtics for a 58-point fourth quarter before bowing 126-118. The 58 points established a National Basketball Association record, breaking the previous mark of 54 set in 1970 by both the Celtics and the Atlanta Hawks.

New Coach Finds Changing Attitudes at Cal

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

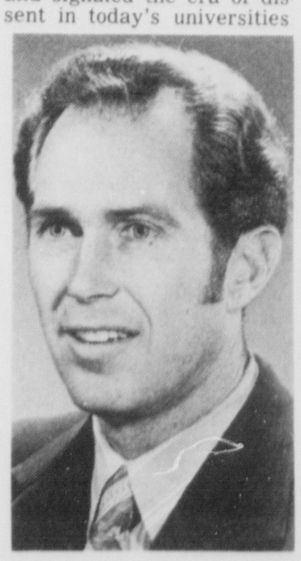
BERKELEY, Calif. — (NEA)—He has just come back at 7 o'clock this morning from Fresno after a long spring practice session on the soggy turf of California Memorial Stadium yesterday afternoon. Now he's back in the shadows of the Berkeley hills this afternoon for more intensive drilling of the 86 player in motley football uniforms.

Because these are the busy days for Mike White, a new head coach in college football. Recruiting (as he was doing in Fresno). Organizing. Instructing. And at the same time learning.

Mike White, at 36, looks like he should be the freshman coach. Firm-jawed, snub-nosed, clear-eyed, and as trim as he was when he played varsity football at this same school 15 years ago. He is now the head football coach at the University of California, whose tradition in the sport goes all the way back to 1886.

"I really think," he says, "that California is ripe for football success."

It has been different at California, which has had the Wonder Teams and the Thunder Teams, since 1964, when the Free Speech Movement was born at Berkeley and signaled the era of dissent in today's universities



Mike White

California hasn't been to the Rose Bowl since 1959.

"The old attitudes," continues Mike earnestly, "are gone. I think the students of today really want to identify with success. I have seen what football success did at Stanford."

Mike was the chief assistant these last eight years to John Ralston at Stanford, down the road on the other side of San Francisco Bay, and when Ralston resigned to go to the pros, Mike could have stepped up to the top job. He opted for Cal instead.

"It shows you how important success is," he says. "I came to California because I had a loyalty here, where I went to school. As for Stanford, it's a tough assignment to follow a winner. It's tough to inherit a job.

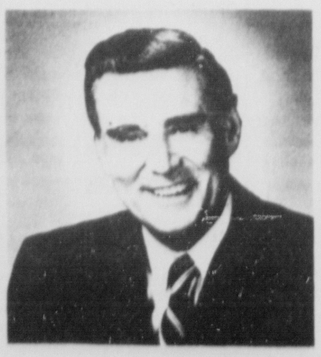
How Do YOU Feel About
A New Gasoline Sales Tax?
"While my opponent favors adding a new sales tax to gasoline, I would veto such an effort." That's how Ed Dowd feels about adding a sales tax to gasoline! He also says, "Gas prices are already high enough . . . adding a sales tax would be highly inflationary." If you feel the same way about adding a sales tax to gasoline, then Ed Dowd's your man for Missouri's Governor.



Sure, the people of Missouri want a change. But we all know a change for change's sake isn't the answer. The real answer lies with a mature man of Ed Dowd's unquestioned good character. The son and grandson of policemen . . . a father who understands . . . a man who didn't inherit a thing except an honest respect for the working man, a compassion for those less fortunate and a sincere willingness to help. We can trust Ed Dowd to do the right thing for all the people. Be sure November 7. Vote for Ed Dowd, Democrat for Governor.

Tomorrow's Violators

JEFFERSON CITY — No matter how bad things get -- how many wars are festering on the earth's surface, how gritty our air has become, how odiferous our water is -- we bank on the younger generation. "Well, thank Heaven for the kids," we say. "They'll straighten things out."

And then you begin to wonder.

"Road hunting continues to be a problem, with five cases in September, mostly juveniles," says Harry Quigley, conservation agent for Sullivan County. "Talking with the youngsters, I find most of them never have had the experience of hunting with an adult.

"They really don't know what hunting is all about and have had no one to teach them. Hunting from the car is easy and when they get together, they end up driving the roads."

And Charles Guthrie, agent for Linn County reports: "I had a lot of teenagers trying to shoot from cars."

And that time the feeling of depression and fear for the future grows overwhelming. And then ...

Agent Bill Otten of Adair County: "Had all three of my young men who took the conservation agent exam make it to the oral interview. I try to spend as much time as I can with these young people. Spoke to the Northeast Missouri College science class and was interviewed by three different college students on three different conservation problems"

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bob Goalby, the 1968 Masters champ, shot a four-under-par 68 Sunday to win the professional title in the annual Music City Pro-Celebrity golf tournament with a 36-hole total of 135.

Goalby's two-day total around the new Crockett Springs National Golf Course was nine-under par, three shots better than Bobby Greenwood of Cookeville, Tenn.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Jim Jamieson fired a oneunder-par 69 Sunday to win the Parliament P Classic, a oneround benefit golf tournament at the Fenway Golf Club.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, Julius Boros and former baseball star Mickey Mantle tied for second.

Sailors in Genoa, Italy, wore denim pants called genes. The name later was Americanized to jeans.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Clues to the origin of the stars are being gathered by an unmanned satellite orbiting 500 miles above the earth.

Called the Orbiting Astronomical Observatory, the satellite is studying the composition of interstellar clouds, believed by some to be the matter from which stars are formed.

"Scientists cannot study these gaseous clouds from the ground," said Dr. Lyman Spitzer of Princeton University, "since the ultraviolet light used to study them cannot penetrate the earth's atmosphere."

With an accuracy equivalent to focusing on the width of a pencil 10 miles away, a fine error sensor orients the satellite's telescope toward an object under investigation. The electronic system was designed and built by GTE Sylvania Inc.

In U.S. -Russian Wheat Deal

Exporters Reaped Profits

BY REP. BILL BURLISON
10th DISTRICT

Late this summer, the sale of wheat and other grains to Russia and China was a major topic of conversation and controversy. It was charged that the large grain exporters, with help from the Department of Agriuclture, were making great profits at the expense of the farmers and small exporters. To investigate this matter, the Livestock and Grains Subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee held hearings. Following are some facts that emerged:

On July 8th, President Nixon and Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz announced that the U. S. and the Soviet Union had made a trade agreement. The terms stated that the Russians are to purchase $750 million in grains from private U. S. grain exporters over the next three years, with $200 million to be purchased in the first year.

In two visits to the U. S., the Soviets bought up 25 per cent of the total American wheat crop for the year -- at bargain prices. At this time, purchases are running four times ahead of the obligation. Russia had purchased $1 billion worth of grain, including eleven million tons of wheat worth $400 million.

The first sale of wheat was made by Continental Grain Company on July 5th, three days before the agreement was finalized. By the end of the day, Continental had sold $500 million worth of grain, more than twice what the Russians would be committed to buy. Ostensibly, the Nixon Administration did not know that the Soviets were in New York buying wheat while other Russians were in Washington arranging the agreement.

This sale of four million tons was followed by an order for an additional one million tons on July 11th. On July 10th and August 1st. Cargill, Inc., sold a total of two million tons. The exporters that participated in the sales are Cargill, Inc., Continental, Bunge Corporation, Cook Industries, Inc., Dreyfus, and Garnac.

In the meantime, the Department of Agriculture was sitting on an August 18th report stating that the outlook for Russian grain production this year had deteriorated. Such information would have alerted the farmers that they could sell their grain at a higher price this year. However, the Department considered the report "too controversial" and squelched it. This allowed the exporters to continue purchasing wheat at low prices.

Since 1949 the U. S. Government has encouraged grain exports through the use of subsidies. The wheat export subsidy fluctuates at the discretion of the Secretary, and is designed to be equal to the difference between the world market price and the U. S. market price. Thus, if foreign countries are paying $1.65 a bushel, and U. S. markets are paying $2 a bushel, the government will pay the exporter 35 cents a bushel so that he will not lose money by exporting.

As the news of the Russian sales became public, the price of U. S. wheat rose, and thus the subsidy rose. On August 23rd, the Department decided that the subsidy was getting too high. On August 25th, it announced an unusual retroactive subsidy for one week (August 25- September 1). The subsidy would be the current 38 cents per bushel, plus a 9 cents supplemental bonus subsidy. After September 1st, the subsidy would be allowed to fall and the government would not attempt to hold the world price at $1.65. Consequently, 280 million bushels of wheat were registered that week, with 60 percent of it going to Russia.

Although it was first denied by a former and a present Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, the Director of the Grain Division of the Export Marketing Service testified that he had called the larger exporters and advised them of an impending change in the subsidy. No calls were made to farmers, millers, bakers, or other businesses concerned with the wheat market. It is widely known that an exporter who knows what is about to take place is in a strong position to assure himself a handsome profit. It appears that the Department moved to protect the profits of the exporters who had been buying on a rising market. Exporters bought most of the wheat in July when the subsidy was 14 cents and registered it after August 25th when the subsidy had risen to 47 cents. It is estimated that over $120 million of taxpayers money has been spent on subsidy payments for the Russian grain sales along, this money now resting in the till of the export trade.

Underlying the foregoing events was a subtle shifting of top executives between the Department of Agriculture and the major grain exporters. The Assistant Secretary of the Department who had headed the team of negotiators in Moscow with Dr. Butz in April is now a Vice President of Continental Grain Company. This official told the Committee that he had received an offer from Continental in March. He bought a $100,000 New York cooperative apartment, using four Continental officers as references, on April 3rd, only days before he was to go to Moscow. He met with Russian officials in Washington again on May 9th, and not until two days later did he submit his resignation.

This official's replacement as Assistant Secretary is the former Executive Officer of the Cook Industries, Inc., a grain exporter. Another member of the negotiating team in Moscow, who served as General Sales Manager of the Export Marketing Service, left the Department in June to become the Washington Representative of Bunge Corporation of Memphis, another exporter. His predecessor at Bunge then joined the Export Marketing Service. Finally, a former Vice President of Cargill, Inc., has been appointed as President Nixon's Deputy Special Representative for Trade Negotiations.

In summary, grain exporters through inside information were able to profit by buying early wheat and placing future orders that cost considerably below what they could have expected to pay after the extent of the Soviet purchases had become known. Had the farmers of Missouri known of the probability of massive wheat sales, they could have waited and sold their wheat at much higher prices. I have found that most of my farmers sold their wheat at $1.25 to $1.35 per bushel.

Most wheat farmers who sold their crop at time of harvest are hurt in two respects. One, they got a low price for their wheat, and two, they will find a severe reduction in final payment on their wheat certificates. The amount of the certificate is based on the market price of wheat during the months July through November. Farmers are guaranteed 100 percent of parity on the domestic allotment. This is done by the government paying the difference between the five month average price and parity. Since wheat prices spiraled upward and remained there subsequent to the time the Missouri farmer sold his wheat, the five month average is thus high and the final payment low or non- existent.

It appeared to some of us that the Department of Agriculture had shown an undue concern about inordinate profits for the big exporters to the prejudice of the wheat producer. To partially offset this and compensate for the number two factor mentioned in the last paragraph, we introduced legislation under which the Federal government would pay the wheat producer the difference between what he sold his wheat for and the five month average. We succeeded in passing this out of the Committee on Agriculture, on which I serve. This was over the adamant opposition of the Administration. That opposition precluded getting the bill through the House and Senate and to the President for his signature. Had we been able to do so, all indications pointed to a Presidential veto. In fairness to the Senate it should be said that Senators Humphrey and McGovern, who serve on the Agriculture Committee, did their best for our proposal.

I am hopeful that the Department of Agriculture will be more careful in the future to guard the interest of the producer when that interest is in conflict with the interest of the grain trade.

Court Knocks Down Residency Requirement

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal court panel of three judges has knocked down Missouri's voter residency requirement of one year for voting in state and local elections and 60 days for voting for president and vice president.

The panel, in a decision reached Friday but not intended to be announced until Tuesday, set 30 days as the minimum required residency period for all elections in Missouri.

A permanent order was signed by U.S. District Court Judges William H. Becker and Elmo B. Hunter and Floyd R. Gibson, of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In a temporary injunction Sept. 22, the court ordered all county clerks to begin registering newcomers to the state, but their registration was kept separate from others in case the temporary order was reversed.

The suit was brought against Cole County Clerk Monte L. Christian by Daniel P. Card II, an assistant attorney general who was denied registration after he moved to the county in July.

The class action ruling will affect about 20,000 Missourians who would not have been allowed to vote under the oneyear requirement for state and local offices, according to unofficial estimates.

All out-of-state students also would be entitled to vote under the ruling.

On Oct. 4, Federal Judge William R. Collinson issued a temporary restraining order enjoining all county clerks from refusing to register students who live in dormitories and students who are not voting in another state by absentee ballot.

The decision was based on the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, forbidding denial of equal protection under the law.

In July, Aty. Gen. John C. Danforth, basing his opinion on the U.S. Supreme Court's decision overturning Tennessee's one-year requirement, said 28 days should be the residency requirement.

Danforth's decision was based on the minimum closing period between registration and the Nov. 7 election in Missouri counties with registration.

But Cole County Circuit Judge James T. Riley instructed Christian not to register voters under the Danforth opinion because it was not law, just an opinion.

In August, a St. Charles County circuit judge upehld Danforth's opinion.

Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, allowed to intervene in the federal court case, suggested 30 days as the minimum residency requirement.

The federal court order says that "all constitutional, statutory and other provisions of Missouri law denying to any resident, domiciled citizen of Missouri the right to register and vote in the general election ... before the close of registration, which is fixed by law at no later than either Oct. 10, 1972, or Oct. 11, 1972, depending on the applicable statute, are unconstitutional and void under the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The order said the decision also applied to precincts where registration is not required.

Advantages To Private Water System

If you're planning to build a new home, don't bypass a choice site just because the area doesn't have a municipal water supply. You can have your own well or provate water system, as it's more properly called, the Plumbing- Heating-Cooling Information Bureau points out.

To many people, the idea of a well conjures up visions of a large- diameter hole with a hand pump and moss- covered bucket. The modern private water system isn't as picturesque but it's much more efficient. Basically it consists of a small- diameter well, electric pump, automatic controls for turning the pump on and off and a storage tank.

More than 10 million families depend upon private water systems for their supply. Besides freedom of choice in a building site, the private system offers these advantages:

1. You have control over your own water supply. You're not subject to rationing due to drought or to living in an area where population growth has outstripped the municipal system's capacity to meet water demand.

2. The constant high pressure of a properly installed system enables you to make full use of all your water- using equipment. No rationing of water between the bathroom, kitchen and laundry during times of peak use.

3. The constant high pressure offers an effective means of fire- fighting, should one break out.

4. Once the system is installed, all it costs is pennies a day to run the pump. You're not subjected to periodic increases in water bills.

5. Well water usually tastes fresher than highly treated city water. Where treatment is called for, it's easy.

Church Observed 75th Anniversary

50 years ago
October 31, 1922

Mrs. Wm. E. Payne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Blanton, with her son, Bill arrived in Sikeston Thursday from her home in Ballston, Va., for a visit. We were happy to see her and the new grandson.

The two teams in football which have, for a number of years, attracted considerable attention in Southeast Missouri, will meet Friday on the Sikeston field. Charleston and Sikeston have long been rivals in athletics. The first few years Charleston had the lead over this school, but now the tide is turned and the local school has been winner.

G.A. Dempster left Wednesday for St. Louis to transact business.

Mrs. John M. Grace of Memphis, Tenn., was in Sikeston Saturday to visit relatives in Mississippi County.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at the residence for James A. Hux, prominent Essex man, who died Saturday. Mr. Hux died at the age of 53 years.

Morehouse-- Mr. and Mrs. Martin Barnett of Cline's Island, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Sherrard Sunday.

Malone Theatre, tomorrow, Lee Tracy in "Washington Merry Go Round" with Constance Cummings, Alan Dinehart and Walter Connolly.

The Sikeston Bulldogs were stopped short Friday by the Chaffee Red Devils on the away ield, with the game ending in a scoreless draw. Both teams lacked pep, snap and punch, resulting in an uninteresting contest which to spectators seemed endlessly drawn out.

In homecoming fashion the 75th anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Church in Sikeston will be observed next week.

Sikeston's high school Bulldogs will renew the rivalry between the Poplar Bluff Mules Friday at the high school field here. On the basis of early season records the Mules appear to be favorites but the knowledge that upsets are frequent in football and the promise of a good game are expected to bring out a large crowd. It will be one of the last games that George (Torchy) Godwin, Poplar Bluff coach, will direct before a period of military services.

Glenn Keller, Missouri Ulilities lineman probably will lose the smallest finger of the left hand as a result of an electrical charge which entered his body at that point while he was on duty at a fire, which destroyed the Shainberg Store here Sunday.

One man was injured fatally and another hurt critically that he may not recover Monday when the truck in which they were riding was struck by a Frisco passenger train at a grade crossing in Lilbourn. James M. Smith, 20 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Smith of near Lilbourn, died Monday. Eddie Ward, 43, Lilbourn, an uncle of the victim, was brought to the Sikeston hospital in a critical condition.

J. Otto Hahs has resigned from the Sikeston school board and R.A. McCord, a former member of the body, has been named by the board to fill out the term expiring in April of 1943.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Young will spend this weekend in St. Louis.

The Sikeston High School Bulldogs, who have been weakened by a number of injuries, edged past a stubborn team of Central Tigers last night, 13—6.

John Doolittle, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus A. Doolittle, 117 West Kathleen, a Daily Standard newsboy, received some minor cuts and bruises on the left leg Saturday when he was hit by a cab on New Madrid street, across from the Dunn Hotel.

Man Fined For Killing 74 Eagles

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)-The former manager of a flying service was fined $500 by a federal judge today after pleading guilty to taking part in the killing of 74 eagles.

Doyle Vaughan of Story, Wyo., former manager of the Buffalo Flying Service, also had pleaded guilty to a conspiracy charge lodged following a federal investigation of the deaths of eagles in the winter of 1970-71.

District Court Judge Ewing T. Kerr said he had decided that since Congress had made the crime a misdemeanor he did not think the court should "elevate it beyond what Congress has done."

He sentenced Vaughan, who had made written pleas of guilty and was not present in court, to pay $500 within 10 days and he was placed on probation for six months without supervision on the other counts.

U.S. Attorney Richard Thomas then said the government would drop the remainder of the 374 counts originally filed against Vaughan, rancher Herman Werner, Werner's ranch and the Buffalo Flying Service.

Prior to sentencing, Thomas told Kerr he considered Vaughan one of the most culpable defendants because his participation "was for profit." The government had alleged Werner paid the flying service $15,000 for predator control. Helicopter flights with paid gunners, including Vaughan, were alleged to have flown over ranchland shooting eagles from the sky.

Mac Davis Gets 'Hooked' into Hit

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The country-and-western field of music has contributed a lot of songs and stars to the entertainment world. Now there's a new one.

Mac Davis may turn out to be the best c-and-w songwriter since the late Hank Williams and possibly the finest performer ever to come out of the backwoods belt.

At the moment, he has a song—"Baby, Don't Get Hooked on Me"—which is his first gold record as a performer. He's already had a few as a writer. Curiously, this first record hit of his own comes with a song that he doesn't much like.

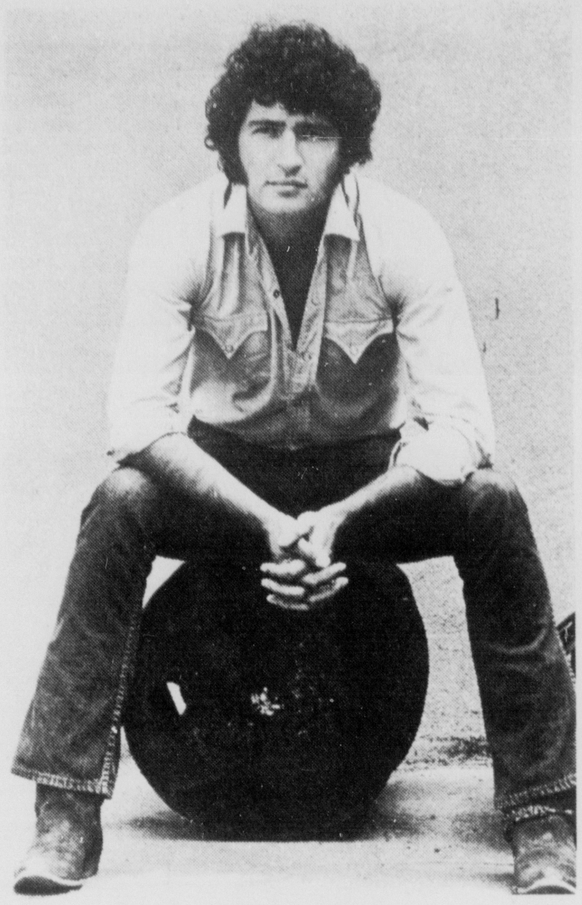
"It's one of the least favorite songs I've written," he says.

It happened on the spur of the recording session. Mac was in the studio, did a few songs, but nothing really soared. His producer, Rick Hall, said that what was needed was a song with a hook in it—in the recording world, a "hook" is a phrase that is repeated over and over.

In frustration, Mac picked up his guitar and sang the first hook phrase he could think of: "Baby, baby, don't get hooked on me." Hall jumped up and down and insisted that Davis record it immediately. And he did the music there and then, went home and wrote the lyrics overnight and added them to the recording the next day.

It's obvious, therefore, that the song is not based on Davis' personal experience, trying to thwart a lovesick girl. But the song may prove to be prophetic.

"I know that now that I'm going big," Davis says, "I may have problems with boppers and groupies. But Sarah (his wife) doesn't have anything to worry about—she doesn't know it, but she doesn't."



Mac Davis
He got the message.

Davis is a good-looking man out of Lubbock, Tex., the son of a small builder and motel operator. Exceptionally bright as a child, he skipped through grammar school so swiftly he was the youngest child in high school.

"Everybody else had beards and their voices had changed," he says, "and I had nothing. All I had was an inferiority complex. To gain attention, I became a hoodlum. I'd steal hubcaps. Start fights. I'd bootleg."

He explains that when he was in high school Texas was dry. In his western part of the state it was fashionable for the boys to dash across to New Mexico, load up on malt liquor and beer, then come back and sell it by the can to the high school swingers.

"There was nothing else to do," he says, "except drive in fast circles around the drive-ins, impressing the girls and scaring the little kids."

At 15 he cut out and went to Atlanta. He tried college but "I was still majoring in beer and ladies, so flunked out." He'd always had a way with music, so started a rock group and did pretty well. Then he got into record promotion and for 5½ years was out of performing entirely.

He began writing again after he got a job in Los Angeles but had no luck at all until he hit with a song for Elvis Presley and did some more for Elvis, winding up with two big Presley hits, "Memories" and the now-classic "In the Ghetto."

Then he started performing again. Now he has more offers and recording dates than he can handle.

He says his only problem is to guard against a swelled head but he thinks he's hit on a method of doing that.

The day "Baby, Don't Get Hooked on Me" hit number one on the charts, he was in his glory. Everybody was calling him to tell him how great he was. He began thinking they were right.

"But that night, about three in the morning," he says, "I woke up in bed. My big old English sheepdog, Blossom, had left a deposit at the foot of my bed. There I was trying to clean that mess out of the shag rug. I believe Blossom was teaching me a lesson so whenever I start to think I'm hot stuff, I think about Blossom's message."

Dowd Voices Need For Professionalism

ST. LOUIS— "There is a general feeling among the people of Missouri that their tax dollars are not efficiently utilized", Edward L. Dowd, Democratic candidate for governor, said in a speech in Lafayette County.

Dowd told the audience that the Office of Administration must bring "modern management techniques and a business- line consciousness of costs versus benefits to state government operations," so state government can accomplish its goals as efficiently and effectively as private industry.

To gauge the success of state programs as accurately as industry does, Dowd recommended the use of such modern measures as "performance appraisals, performance and program budgeting and performance auditing."

Dowd also spoke of the need to get from employes the same level of performance which industry expects. "I strongly support and would actively work for the implementation of most of the recommendations of the 'Little Hoover' Commission in the area of personnel administration. We need to obtain maximum service for our money from our employes."

In order to encourage good state employes to stay on the job, Dowd said, "We need to create a career service for state employes. Presently, too many good employes working for state government jump to the federal government or private industry because they see greater opportunities for advancement there. This is wasteful and inefficient.

"When we invest money in an employe to train him for a job, we should provide a visible avenue of promotion to keep him in the state's service. This would end the role of state government as a training ground for private industry and the federal government.'.

Dowd also favors "providing fringe benefits for state employes similar to those provided by most private employers in the state; insulating state employes from the political process" so that their jobs are not dependent on support of a particular candidate; and equalizing salaries paid by the separate state divisions for similar work.

In this way, employes are discouraged from the practice of moving from one division to another in search of a better salary for the same work.

To make sure that employes are working effectively, Dowd called for "regular evaluations of each employe's performance. Should it not be up to par, corrective conferences should be conducted. On the other hand, should an employe be doing a good job, he should be recognized and regarded."

Dowd concluded by saying "I know that what Missourians want is efficient and professional services rendered as quickly as possible with a minimum of red tape. That will be a priority goal of the Dowd Administration.

Hearnes To Be Keynote Speaker

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will bring the keynote address at the sixth annual Governor's Conference on Agriculture to be held Nov. 19-21 at Ramada Inn.

The annual meeting was initiated by Gov. Hearnes in 1967 as a "forum for farm and agri- business leaders to explore the problems and potential of Missouri agriculture." He will address the group at a dinner on Monday evening, Nov. 20.

The new governor to be elected Nov. 7 -- either Democrat Edward L. Dowd or Republican Christopher (Kit) Bond (Rep.) -- is scheduled to be the featured speaker at Monday's luncheon.

Other personalities already committed to be on the program include William Galbrieth of Washington, D. C., deputy secretary of the U. S. Department of Agriculture; Daniel M. Dalrymple of New York, agricultural consultant to the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in Washington, D. C.; Commissioner Dexter D. Davis, Missouri Department of Agriculture; and Miss Jeanne Thurman, MDA's "Farmer's Daughter."

What's The Law?

The Case Of The Well-Stalked Damsel

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

While Mortimer had plenty of assets, they didn't compare to the assets of his shapely girl friend Hilda. While she carried her assets with her, however, Mortimer kept most of his in his library safe.

One day, Mortimer pointed to his safe and told Hilda that he was giving her a gift of all the diamonds the safe contained. Whereupon, she thanked him with a million kisses and left the room. Unfortunately, Mortimer never returned. He died shortly thereafter.

Upon learning of her benefactor's death, Hilda immediately requested possession of all the diamonds in the safe. The executor of Mortimer's estate, however, merely smiled.

"But they're mine," insisted the girl. "Mortimer specifically gave them to me."

"Nonsense," replied the executor. "They never left the safe. So how could Mortimer have given them to you? While you may have prospected Mortimer, you've got no prospect of getting the diamonds from me."

Bouncing angrily out of the room, Hilda took her claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give Hilda the diamonds contained in the safe?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that there is no gift unless there is a delivery and an acceptance of the thing being given. In this case, concluded the judge, there was no delivery of the diamonds.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more. (John 8:11)

PRAYER Father, I have been very irritated with certain ones around me. I have not accepted them. I have been trying to make them over. Give me Thy love and compassion to build bridges from my life to theirs. In Jesus' name. Amen.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Television: Some Pros and Cons

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I would like to have some information on the bad effects of watching TV by children who watch to the exclusion of play, homework, socializing and consequent truancy.

Dear Reader—I won't attempt to review all of the different comments that have been made about violence on TV and these problems, but I will say that continually watching TV to the exclusion of normal childhood play can lead to degeneration of the body's normal functions from physical inactivity. A study a few years ago showed that children who were irritable, chronically fatigued, with vague complaints, were found to be chronic TV watchers with very little exercise.

I studied the problem of inactivity in relation to the space program and the expected prolonged weightlessness problems. My colleagues and I learned that inactivity breeds low energy levels. In normal individuals it causes a decrease in the amount of muscle mass. There is a decrease in the formation of red blood cells and a loss of normal water from the body tissues. The heart and circulatory system become "deconditioned." The heart rate is rapid and lacks the normal strength and stamina for reasonable amounts of physical exercise. There are probably adverse metabolic effects as well.

Many TV programs are wonderful, educational experiences. Others are wholesome entertainment. But like other things, there is an optimal amount. The only solution is to turn off the TV at regular intervals and insist on a little more normal, human activity characteristic of growing children.

Dear Dr. Lamb—What would happen if a lung is punctured during a nerve block in the chest area? Would it heal eventually and, if so, how long would it take?

Dear Reader—The lungs are composed of multiple tiny air sacs. If one is punctured the lung behaves somewhat like an inner tube and collapses. Because it is composed of many small air sacs only a portion of those air sacs near the area where the puncture occurred may collapse. This varies depending on how big the tear is and other factors. How much trouble a person has depends on how much collapse of the lung occurs. If just a very small amount of collapse occurs, it may be almost unnoticeable.

The collapse will persist until the tear has healed over then, like an inner tube that has been patched, it can be inflated again and regains its normal function. If the tear is large and the lung is totally collapsed sometimes the normally functioning lung will expand to push against the heart and blood vessels to cause difficulties.

Some people have spontaneous collapse of a lung because a little blister on the surface of the lung bursts. These, too, usually heal spontaneously. Occasionally there is associated bleeding and this requires careful medical management.

Air trapped between the collapsed lung and the chest wall is gradually absorbed as the lung re-expands, however, during the time air is trapped in this space one should not travel by air or take a trip from sea level to altitude. The trapped air between the lung and chest wall will expand with decreased air pressure and can cause increased pressure inside the chest against the heart. This same problem used to arise regularly when air was injected between the lung and the chest wall to induce collapse in treating patients with tuberculosis.

If it is a small puncture it usually doesn't take long for the lung to heal and re-expand—usually a matter of weeks.

? Consumer's Question Box

Q. I don't understand the labeling of canned hams, because the labeled weight is never what the ham inside really weighs. Is this illegal?

A. When you check the weight on a canned ham lable, remember that it includes the weight of the natural cooked-out juices and gelatin. The reason for including the juices is that they already exist in the ham and are part of it as the ham is cooked in the can. The juices are composed of cooked-out meat proteins and fat. With the gelatin they become part of the actual food in the can. There is a difference between meats cooked in the can, and meats cooked separately and canned after cooking. In the latter, the drained weight is used on the label.

Radios To Broadcast Election Returns

NEW YORK (AP) — A week from today, four radio networks linked to nearly 2,500 stations across the country will start flashing election night results throughout the nation.

Most of the attention will be on the television reports, but radio's method of covering the national vote will be the same.

There'll be computer projections of who won what races, learned analyses of how we voted and why and remote broadcasts from as many as 33 separate locations with the cries of winners and losers alike.

For radio's elders — anyone who recalls "Allen's Alley" — all this is a far cry from the seat-of-the-pants prognostications of 1948, when there was a long, long wait to learn President Harry S. Truman was indeed going back to the White House for four more years.

And it's an even longer way from the 1920 model, when the first radio coverage of a presidential election came from station KDKA in Pittsburgh, Pa. The coverage, among other things, asked if anybody was listening.

There's no question these days whether the news is being heard. The main problem of today's radio is that television and the speed of the computer have stolen most of the election night thunder.

Despite that, radio still is in there pitching. And its means of getting the news out in 1972 has become incredibly sophisticated.

ABC, for example, is broadcasting the Nov. 7 results on each of its four sub-networks. It has eight anchormen reporting the vote on the ABC "information," "entertainment," "contemporary" and "FM" networks.

At CBS radio, as on CBS television, there'll be two anchormen and four regional correspondents. NBC radio will have two anchormen for the overall report and two correspondents watching the gubernatorial, Senate and key House races.

It would provide a healthful and well appreciated change of atmosphere for both the student and the instructor.

Scavenger hunt-type tests could be designed to use the center more effectively.

Certain "natural" animal populations could be introduced into the center to be studied and experimented with.

Those students doing work with insects would find it an asset to have the center, since greater diversity of plants will assure one of a correspondingly diverse group of insects.

Facilities could be added to the "living laboratory" in the future. A work center for students to study specimens could be provided, along with a protective fence to retain experimental animals and to keep vandals out.
